Make your mark on the 19th century, A forever opened mouth has a great

Life is our opportunity to evince our fitness for immortality.

To be truly great is to be radically different from what you are.

Charity makes the best of everything and labors to make everything the best. Charity is meek, will not be glorified, but giveth all the glory to God, who is Let your mental hand reach beyond the mere fact if you would grasp all the fact implies. In the great world's exposition of brains, the space is not all taken up or even applied for. The omnivorous mosquito can fetch a very jerky and impious prayer from the lips of a pious saint.

Charity bears with mistakes, pitieth infirmity, strengthens the weak, forgiveth sin and cleanseth iniquity.

A hobby does not advance the world in wisdom any more than a man is made handsome by being all mouth.

As the ideals of intellectual effort become higher the sincere worker becomes more thorough, serious and efficient.

That peculiar statesmanship made up of maneuver, tact, compromise and dodging has the elements of a first-class political dude.

In this world common place persons and silly things draw more than intellectual force, but the numbers drawn lack quality.

Better be true in hell than false in heaven, but such a thing cannot be, for the truest is the best, and the best will survive as fittest, with an infinitude of Parents cannot curse their home and offspring more effectually than to teach by precept or example, the baneful vice of idleness, for where this fatal night shade is fed upon all is death.

To look at the present congress, remembering Hamilton, Webster, Clay, Sumner and Garfield, is not favorable to the theory of evolution unless evolution has side shows of intellectual decline.

Hypocrisy deceives the hypocrite with the brazen falsity, that man can be successfully two persons, two diametrically opposite characters at the same time, so as to present such a heinous fraud before the Almighty, in the way of challenge, for his protection and blessing.

Traditional dogmas contain some fragments of truth and error mixed in one consolidated compound, but truth contains all that is pure, true and divine, without any admixture of error, therefore, let our search be for truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

Life is a charming scene, a magic picture, a royal banquet, a harmonious as that perpetrated upon this little girl, festival, a luminous circle; a brilliant diadem, where beauty, worth, sympathy, tenderness, courage, charity, endurance with me that it is not; and every father in christendom will say amen! Murder picture, a royal banquet, a harmonious and legions of angels dwell, minister to, and make perfect, those who are amiable as a child, braver than a lion, and as loving as Christ.

bers of rest, society in which we move, the friends of our choice, the nectarean joys of reason, the elysium bliss of home, the earth on which we live with so many happy and varied employments, business and pleasures, none of these can be appreciated or enjoyed by the lazy loafer, by the miserable sluggard.

There are men and women who go around with a chip on the shoulder, anxious for a quarrel. They will quarrel over religion, politics or the weather, over line fences, chickens or children, over dresss, cats, dogs, or even such small things as themselves. Anything will answer for a quarrel rather than miss. Avoid such nuisances.

To disbelieve in the nobility of work, and have faith in laziness is the most hopeless and wretched atheism. God exists to perform. The glory of His mighty acts shineth from the beginning. What He hath brought forth exists to labor. Activity is written on wind and water, upon the heavens and earth, upon matter and spirit. Idleness is anomoly, the irregular production of sinful man.

The professional quarreler has no faith in the good, but sees an immensity from one of the editorials on the subject of bad because of his own wicked heart. His life is made up of tricks, and being mean and malicious, he suspects many tributes the worst motives to outward acts. He will injure, insult, and then to things that do not exist, and always at-

A Little Hanging Wanted.

To the Editor of the Detroit Evening News:

To the Editor of the Detroit Evening News:

"The courts of Michigan can do full justice to the Cheboygan fiend, should he be caught."—News of 14th.

In reading the above I think you are mistaken. I do not, for one instant, advocate the adoption of "lynch law," to the exclusion of the laws of this commonwealth, bit even if this monster is found guilty, what will be his fate? Simply incarceration for life in Jackson, where he will be well fed, lodged, and not overworked. I ask, is this adequate punishment for such a monstrous crime punishment for such a monstrous crime is becoming one of the fine arts of Michigan—not perhaps in the action itself, which is just as red-handed and diabolical as ever, but in the æsthetic (?) efforts of the presentations lawar to shield and oving as Christ.

The air, the things we cat, the slumers of rest, society in which we move, the friends of our choice, the nectarean object of reason, the elysium bliss of home, as a sever, but in the esthetic (?) enorise of the unscrupulous lawyer to shield and finally clear the criminal, at the expense of thrice blinded justice, and the beforged minds of 12 men selected to pass upon the case. Said an old Scotch judgeto a criminal in the dock before him, "I'm a criminal in the dock before him, "I'm thinking, my mon, a little hanging will de ye na harm." The same sentiment will apply to some of the "red handed" criminals of this state, who, were such the law, would cause fewer "Martha Whitlas" to be fished out of Detroit river. Whitlas" to be fished out of Detroit river. I know I but echo the feelings of a vast majority of the people of Michigan when I say that the false sentiment which caused the repeal of capital punishment in this state has had its day, and should give place to the edict—old as time—"Whosoever shedeth man's blood by man shall his blood be shed!" Can we wonder that the sword of the avenger of blood follows hard upon the heels of those who have set the laws of God and man at defiance to gratify a lust for revenge or brutal passion? Long years has Maine tried the abolishment of the scaffold, to finally return again to it, and if Michigan would keep "Jadge Lynch" and his court beyond her borders, she will retrace her steps to the time when her legislature made the blunder of expunging capital punishment from her statute books.

The Detroit Evening News has denounced the hanging of Warner in the severest terms. The following, taken is a fair expression of its opinion:

The hanging of Warner was an attact upon the life and liberty of every man, woman and child of the state. It save himself from the consequences of insult and injury, will equivocate and lie.

It outrages; murder calculated to destroy popular reverence for law inasmuch as it appeals to popular passions, instead of exciting popular horror.
