To the young it will be a special delight and all can see it as it will continue for one week.

Miss Nellie Melville was the recipient of a Christmas present from Mrs. Robert Patterson. It is a pin cushion of large size in scarlet covering, edged with delicate white lace. Daisies, with butterflies on the upper side, some in repose others on the wing; all painted with the donor's artistic hand, invests the souvenir with charms other than those of mere remembrance. Of course the fair Nellie prizes it.

In this issue the TRIBUNE parts with 1883 but not without many pleasant memories. It is grateful to the community for its approval and good wishes. On the threshold of 1884 it looks with confidence to that public opinion that has cheered it on. Trusting that, however, differing with many of our readers in the coming political struggle, its devotion to the common interests shall not be undeserving of the public regard. To old and new friends we wish all a Happy New Year.

Masonic Festival.

In every nation where human progress admits the light of Freemasonry, the festival of St. John the Evangelist, on the 27th of December, is celebrated with imposing ceremony. The fraternity purposed in its festivals to worship the Grand Architect of the Universe, humbly imploring his blessings upon the race, and entering upon the feast of brotherly affection and universal benevolence. It was deemed most conducive to the benefit of the order, and the honor and advantage of the lodges to have this year, an installation of the officers of the Blue Lodge and Chapter, to conclude with a banquet and ball, to be witnessed and participated in by Masons and their ladies. The craft numbers so many here that their large lodge room and parlors are filled by members and lady friends on such an occasion. The event on Thursday night eclipsed all that had preceded it in the undertakings of the order. In the elaborate ceremony there was observed that dignity, efficiency and solemnity so essential to ceremony. In the striking, costly vestures, and implements, there was much to interest the eye, also to improve the mind of the thinker. The Chapter did well for its first appearance. There is always so much to learn in Freemasonry that there can only be comparative excellence obtained but it is safe to say the order here is a credit and honor to the fraternity. The feast was rich, elaborate, and enjoyed to the full. The dancing was in keeping with the dances of our city.

Dedication.

Odd Fellowship is buoyant with youthful energy and rings with the emphasis of a conquering army. The fraternity has crowded as much good into 65 years as any benevolent organization was ever honored with. Recognizing no aristocracy but that of mind and soul, belying in a Universal Father and its accompanying truth the universal Brotherhood of the race, standing squarely upon the equality of human rights, consecrated to a world-wide benevolence, seeing no distinction but that of goodness, the Order has overcome calumny, persecution and wrought results that are astounding even in this age of rush and greatness. The new Lodge room was dedicated on Christmas eve to the sacred purposes of the order in a manner that honored the fraternity, the lodge, and the city. The members within themselves, conducted the beautiful, expressive ceremony of the hour solemnly, correctly and to the delight of the crowded hall. The Pastor of the Independent Church delivered an address. The dance was an eminent success. The feast of good things to eat and drink at the Benjamin House was a magnificent banquet. The Lodge room is handsome and elegantly furnished. The order has no debt, several hundred dollars on interest, growing rapidly with over eighty members. Now let us have an Encampment.
