NORTHERN TRIBUNE.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER, 18, 1884.

The immigration returns for August show that 14,836 immigrants landed in Canada. Of these 5,895 were passengers for the United States, leaving 8,941 who settled in the Dominion. Since the first of January 112,512 entered Canada as immigrants, 48,275 of whom intended settling in the United States, leaving 64,235 who settled in the Dominion. These figures are below those for the corresponding period of 1883, when, up to the end of August, 134,834 persons had landed in Canada. Of these 80,011 settled in the country, and 54,823 went to the States.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer, Democratic, said on Monday of last week: "In the event of Mr. Cleveland's election, his daughter will preside at the White House." This is news! The country has heard of Mr. Cleveland's son, and of that son's mother; but, if there's a daughter, she must still have a different mother in order to be old enough to preside at the White House. Can it be possible that the Democratic habit of inventing libels about candidates for high office is so strong that the Cleveland Plain Dealer, in a moment of carelessness, is slandering its own party nominee for President? —Detroit Post.

DAVID HARPSTER, the great wool grower of Ohio, was interviewed in Chicago by a reporter of the Inter Ocean in regard to the part the wool growers of his state would take in the Presidential contest. He said: "There are 93,000 wool growers in Ohio. I should think that nearly half of them are Democrats. Last year all the Democratic wool growers voted for Hoadley, and many of the Republican wool growers. Others of the Republicans staid at home. This year the situation is very different. The wool growers are satisfied with the Republican promises on the wool tariff, and dissatisfied with the Democratic. So all our Republican sheep raisers will go to the polls and vote their ticket, and I think one third of the Democratic wool growers will vote the same way. This, you see, will make a very great change in the vote in Ohio."

DEMOCRATIC papers and individuals, realizing the importance the Maine election would have upon the National campaign, and knowing that it was sure to be Republican, in order to break the force it would have on the Presidential campaign, were strong in their claim that the Republican majority, in order to have any significance, should not be less than 20,000, a figure they were sanguine could not be reached, and a figure that the most sanguine Republican never claimed. The next day after the election when the state was claimed by the Republicans by 16,000 majority their "I told you so's" were loud and enthusiastic, and they tried to impress everybody that, lacking the 20,000 majority, the Republicans had no encouragement from the result. Even this consolation is denied them, for later returns show that the Republican majority exceeds 20,000, and is still growing.

The business of the country is more important than the business of the Government. Washington may wag along with bad men in office; but bad business in the land means a lean market basket. The Democratic party has already done something to empty the basket by meddling with the tariff. It will do more if it gets a chance. Its candidate, its caucus, its leaders are all Free traders, and there is not to-day a single prudent man who would not sell his stock in factory, furnace and stack, in mine, kiln and vat, if he thought Grover Cleveland was to be elected next November. Such a man knows that such stock stands higher now than it will when that happens. Will it pay in a business way to invite a manufacturing earthquake? Is it good policy to set every factory chimney to reeking to find out whether they could stand plumb with Republican Protection pulled out from under the foundation.—Philadelphia Press.

TAMMANY'S ENDORSEMENT.

Cold Comfort for the Democrats.

Friday evening Tammany Hall Democrats met to hear the report of the general committee appointed to prepare a statement of the position held by that organization toward the Democratic candidates. The report is quite lengthy and reviews the history of Tammany from its organization. The report acknowledges the great antagonism among the working classes of New York against Cleveland and cites as the cause his vetoing the five cent fare bill of the elevated railroad, the bill limiting the hours of labor for car drivers and conductors, the lien law to protect mechanics and laborers; and says:

"We might add and enumerate other instances, but we have shown sufficient to have warranted even stronger opposition on our part to the nominee of the Democratic party than we made at Chicago.

"The candidates of the Democratic party having been nominated in national convention, following the uniform and unbroken record of our organization we acquiesce in the will of the majority of the representatives of the party although we believe that will to have been unwisely expressed. There is but one other alternative left us—to sever our connection with the Democratic party. This we cannot and will not do."

The Republicans are willing that the Democrats shall gather all the comfort they can out of this endorsement, the vote of New York will show that the "working men who compose the bulk of the Democratic voters of the state of New York," are still dissatisfied with Cleveland and will not vote for a man that has struck their interests so hard by his vetoes in the interests of capitalists and monopolists.

GRADY'S SPEECH.

Ex-Senator Grady, rising to protest against the passage of this resolution and adoption of this address, made a long speech. He reviewed the whole political career of Cleveland, and quoted freely from columns of the Times and Herald in the past in support of the position he (Grady) had now taken. In the course of his speech Mr. Grady said: "Neither in the nomination of the ticket nor in the method by which it was brought about is there the slightest claim upon the great body of the Democratic voters for its support. The great majority of the delegates to the convention which named Cleveland as their first choice represented Republican constituencies. A number of delegates who openly and earnestly opposed his nomination were recorded, in spite of all their protest, as favorable to his candidacy. Every influence that could be employed or engineered by the monopolists, who have secured control of the party management, was exerted to make him the candidate, and as you well know, delegates who left their homes and their professions, hostile to his candidacy, as inviting certain defeat to the party, gave evidence soon after their arrival at Chicago of a change of heart, which only the most simple and charitable have ascribed to pure and worthy motives. The expressed design of the men who urged his nomination was to conciliate disgruntled Republicans, not to please Democrats. Preserving to myself the supreme right of a citizen of exercising the act of sovereignty, I decline to prostitute my prerogative to the purposes of the party managers. Suffrage has been bestowed on me by the institutions of my country that it may be exercised for the country's welfare. To the prosperity and benefit of this land I dedicate it, and I cannot reconcile, without desecration, any disposition of it that would result in the support of a political nondescript, clothed in the outward garb of a Democrat, ignorant of the cardinal principles of the political faith which he assumes to profess, and accepting from Democrats their votes that he may delight Republicans and Independents [by the manner in which he will exercise the powers conferred upon him by a betrayed and deluded party. But my vote will not be lost to the Democracy. It will be cast for a candidate whose followers will be numbered by hundreds of thousands, whose motives cannot be impugned, for their action can be inspired by no selfish hopes of reward. It will be registered for the principles which the Democratic party professed when it held the popular confidence, and for abandoning which, they lost the popular support. It will be given for a candidate who has no hope of election and no desire for the sordid benefits of political preferment, but who braves fatigue, abuse and pecuniary loss, that true Democrats may find his candidacy a channel through which they may express their sentiments.

I turn my back on a Democratic party captured and betrayed by a know-nothing demagogue, hungry for place and spoils, and join a pure Democracy which struggles for the principles which the party organization has abandoned. I denounce a candidate whose only merit is his obscurity, that I may follow a statesman whose life has made glorious the history of his country. I decline to bow down before a graven image because I prefer to follow the teachings of an apostle of the true political faith, preferring shining ability to dull mediocrity, a true reformer to a sham reformer, a statesman to a hangman, an illustrious citizen to a political adventurer. I decline to support Grover Cleveland for the Presidency, and here and now, in the presence of a leader whom I have always regarded as my political sponsor, in the midst of brethren and comrades with whom I have shared many a hard fought political field, and before the eyes of all the country, to whom I have this night laid bare my motives and my purposes, I declare myself in favor of Benjamin F. Butler, the soldier, jurist, statesman, and I appeal to time for my vindication.

Grady's speech occupied an hour in delivery. He was obliged to make several pauses to allow the audience to give expression to its approval of his ideas.

HENRY L. NELSON, Speaker Carlisle's private secretary certifies that Ex-Sheriff Cleveland is a good free-trader. He says:

There is no doubt of Mr. Cleveland's position, and he is thoroughly in earnest in the cause of revenue reform as is his friend Mr. Dorsheimer. In the contest in Congress last winter he stood with Carlisle and Morrison, and against Randall. It is within my personal knowledge that he wrote letters to New York members of Congress urging them to vote with Mr. Morrison, both on the question of consideration and on the motion to strike out the enacting clause of the Morrison bill. At least one vote, perhaps more, was gained for the bill by these letters.

A Voucher of Intellectual Capacity.

From the New York Sun.

No professional man of letters can fail to appreciate the admirable clearness, precision, and vivacity of Mr. Blaine's style. On the whole, "Twenty Years of Congress" is a book of which any American historian might be proud, and a less favorable judgment will not be pronounced by any man who knows merit when he sees it, and who does not allow his personal predilections to stifle or distort the utterance of honest criticism. Whatever may be the out-come of the author's practical expectations he can look back with feelings of unmixed satisfaction on this abiding memorial of talents well applied. Rarely, indeed, has any party been able to present on behalf of its candidate for the presidential office so impressive a voucher of intellectual capacity.
