> Edward Everett Hale, in a recent magazine article, says that "women's clubs" and societies would not presper unless they took up some line of work for humanity, and that in every community there was work that only women could do; there were wrongs to be righted and rough places to be made smooth, which man in his busy. strenuous life so often neglected or overlooked, and that a community as sell as a home needed the quick eye, the warm heart and the busy hand of woman. Now here is a wrong to be righted, and it is one that rests entirely with the women of our city. If they turn their thumbs up the merchants and their clerks can pass from the arena of toil after nine hours of

few hours of freedom; but if women turn their thumbs down, it is now as in the days of old Rome -some must be sacrificed. Let madame, the night shopper, put herself in the place of the clerk; let her walk back and forth through the long tastes of various people, to keep up a smiling face and a courteous manner to all kinds of folks, whether they are silly or sensible, and then let madame, the night shopper, say what her verdict would be if she were the clerk. It is the voice of the women that will determine the question of the early closing through the summer months; if they favor it the merchants will combine in the closing. It was a prominent merchant of our city so we call the attention of our women to this bit of home mission work for them. They may not think of it as

Origin of Two Familiar Proverbs. It was the habit of the great Greek painter Apelles never to let a day pass. however busy he chanced to be, without practicing his hand by tracing the outline of some object, a custom which has now passed into a proverb-"No day without a line." He also made it a rule, when he had finished a canvas, to exhibit it to the view of those who visited his studio, while he himself. hidden behind the picture, would listen to their comments. It is said that once a shoemaker censured him for having painted a pair of shoes with one latchet too few. Next day the shoemaker, revisiting the studio, saw that the painter had corrected the mistake. He then began to criticise the leg of the portrait, upon which Apelles came forward and reminded him that a shoemaker should not go beyond the shoes,
