THE MISSES CURE PLAY AT THE SANFORD

Misses Mildred and Ruth Cure are playing at the New Sanford Cafe during the lunch and dinner hour, and their programs are affording the patrons much pleasure. The girls are splendid pianists and this work is good for them.

The real test of ability is pleasing the public—it is, in truth, the only test. The public will not be fooled nor does it express appreciation if it does not feel it. By pleasing the patrons of the Sanford, Misses Cure have proved themselves capable to entertain and it goes farther than just the gushing admiration of intimate friends.

HEN HATCHES QUAIL EGGS

Out on the Charley Miller farm, west of town, is a mother hen with a family of eighteen little quail trotting around after her. This came about when Mr. Miller found a quail's nest in a field in which he was listing, and he put the eggs under a setting hen with the result that she hatched the whole nestful and now has a host of baby quail running to her clucking. When hatched it is said the quail were only about the size of a bumble bee.
