

A DOCTOR'S CONFESSION.

He Doesn't Take Much Medicine and Advises the Reporter No To.

"Humbly? Of course it is. The science of medicine is a humbug and has been from the time of Hippocrates to the present. Why, the biggest crank in the Indian tribes is the medicine man."

"Very frank was the admission, especially so when it came from one of the biggest young physicians of the city, one whose practice is among the thousands, though he has been graduated but a few years," says the Buffalo Courier.

"Take the prescriptions laid down in the books and what do you find? Poisons mainly, and nauseating stuffs, that would make a healthy man an invalid. Why in the world science should go to poisons for its remedies I cannot tell, nor can I find any one who can."

"How does a doctor know the effect of his medicine?" he asked. "He calls, prescribes, and sends away. The only way to judge would be to stand over the bed and watch the patient. This cannot be done. So, really, I don't know how he goes to tell what good or hurt he does. Some time ago, you remember, the Boston Globe sent out a reporter with a stated set of symptoms. He went to eleven prominent physicians and brought back eleven different prescriptions. This just shows how much science there is in medicine."

"There are local diseases of various characters for which nature provides positive remedies. They may not be included in the regular physician's list, perhaps, because of their simplicity but the evidence of their curative power is beyond dispute. Kidney disease is cured by Warner's Safe Cure, a strictly herbal remedy. Thousands of persons, every year, write to H. J. Gardner, of Fontaine, R. I., August 7, 1890.

"A few years ago I suffered more than probably ever will be known outside of myself, with kidney and liver complaint. It is the old story—I visited doctor after doctor, but to no avail. I was at Newport, and Dr. Blackman recommended Warner's Safe Cure. I commenced the use of it, and found relief immediately. Although I took three bottles, and I truthfully state that it cured me."

Vigorous Men and Women.

The vigorous are those who pay attention to the laws of health, of which one of the foremost is, Take care of your digestion. Should a temporary attack of that enemy, dyspepsia, surprise you, foil his subsequent assaults with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. From the stomach come the fundamental supplies which minister to vigor, and, thoroughly transmuting into blood, actively circulated, are the maintenance of the system. Pained in constipation, nervous, fatigued in figure, appetiteless, poor sleepers, are the dyspeptic. Reinforced and built up by the great stomachic, the man and the thin increase in bulk; appetite improves, nervous symptoms disappear, sleep grows tranquil and refreshing, and the intransigence of mind and despondency notable in invalids gives place to light-heartedness, a capacity for enjoyment of the good things of this life. Use the Bitters for malaria, biliousness, rheumatic and kidney troubles.

HANNAH'S JERSEY.

BY CLARA M. HOWARD.

"A fine Jersey? Well, yes, sir; she's made of the right kind of wool."

"Bay her?" "Ah, no, sir. You have to be sure she's all his own. But she's a nice little piece."

"Wouldn't own such a critter?" "Well, no, sir; for just let Jabez come right her. An' see how she'll let her heels fly."

"How does she know the difference?" "Well, sir, she knows a word'n you think; you see Jabez abused her. While tryin' to larn her to drink."

"How was that?" "Well, sir, I'll tell you: It happened in this way: Yee see, 'Twas in springtime—the men were all busy. An' Jabez, he was a hard worker. Now he hates farmin', does Jabez. An' work allus makes him feel sore. For he was raised up in the city—Was cirt'n in a dry-goods store."

But father's head across were temptin'. An' as I was the only child, He proposed. Of course I accepted. Though I think now I must have bin wild. Father was sore disappointed. 'Cause I chose a husband from town; His folks that he'd married beneath him—For him 'twas a nice cun down. To change his store close for blue drillin'. An' knockin' right down to hard work. Though I'll say this much for Jabez: He's never bin known to shirk. But he likes himself to the eagle. Tied down to the barnyard fowl. I fall to see the resemblance—He's more like a great stupid owl."

He boasts of his great education, But he's all mixed down here. When we're only a set of children; He feels quite above us—that's clear. Yet, with all of his top-story knowledge, He's more like a great stupid owl."

"GENTLY, TO ME SHE'S ALL HIS OWN."

He's lett'n' the farm run down; His leavin' it in his work, sir. An' he's allus longin' for town.

When father was livin' 'twas different, For he allus looked after the farm, But he'd git well when 'twas warm—But he died. An' then Jabez. Said the farm didn't pay an' we'd sell; But Jabez different 's'ay home, sir. An' I'll not leave it, at least for a spell.

I tell him his brains an' his larnin' Are just as much needed here As they ever were up in the city. For the farm needs a good financier To make things come out even. An' balance the profit an' loss. To know what crops pay the best, sir. An' not get cheated buyin' a horse.

The farmer needs somethin' of science, Likewise a dash of the law. To understand effects an' their causes, An' to make all his trades 'bout a law. Of medicine, too, he needs knowledge—In order to care for his stock, sir. An' cure their numerous ills.

An' then he must be a good fighter, For tell of a general you know. Who fought such numerous army. As the persistent potato-bug foe. To say nothin' of 'hoppers an' chinch bugs. Of traps an' lightnin'-rod men, too—'Tis to make for the right man at 'lection—Is there aught he don't need to know?

But Jabez, like all city-bred people, Looks down on us plain country folk. Guess they'd find 'bout us farmers That little 's'ow be a state joke. Who'd furnish their bread an' their butter? Where'd be their pork an' their beef? Who'd keep all their big mills a runnin'? Yes, without us they'd soon come to grief!

Without us, there'd be your railroads, With all their rub an' their noise; An' where'd your great men all cum from If the farmer quit raisin' boys? When I talk all this to Jabez he scorns it. An' see I'm not up with the times. Thinks he can live without farmin'—From his brain coin dollars an' dimes. He thanks God he was not born a farmer. 'Tis such a low callin'; but then 'Tis the noblest an' first occupation God ever gave unto men. For wasn't Father Adam a farmer? An' the garden of Eden a farm? Then why scorn the brown-handed toiler. Who from the earth gains a livin' By the aid of his strong right arm?

Let me see: Where was I? Out to the barn, I think. 'Tain't a part of the milkin'. An' learnin' the calf to drink. Well, the better—her mother—was restive At bein' deprived of her calf. An' Jabez got riled pretty easy—He's got too much temper by half—But he managed by some loud talkin', An' several sound blows from his fist, To frighten her into submission—On beatin' her 'dus he lost. Well, when we'd finished the milkin', There was the calf to be fed. So he backed it up in the corner. And into the padd he landed. The calf choked an' struggled— I said 'Jabez, an' not the best way. Father allus—' You shet up, Hannah! An' I'd not a word more to say. So he went on 'bout his finger. That's a regular old fog plan: I believe in new ways to do things—I'm not that kind of a man!"

All this time the calf was strugglin'—She didn't seem to like the new way. An' 'twas Jabez pump in the gutter. Which hadn't been cleaned that day. Some way as he was a failin'— He had got accused in the pullin'—He threw his hands up blindly. An' caught the old cow by the tail.

Of course at all this commotion, Though a staid an' dignified beast, She kicked, and hit poor Jabez A dozen times at least. 'Thout hurtin' him much tho'— An' he rose, very black in the face, Swore at farmers an' farmin'. An' cursed the whole bovine race.

Then he knocked the calf down with the milk-stool. An' kicked it until I cried. And, though I know it was wicked, I was glad his four hoofs had died. For if he'd abuse a poor helpless creature, Why wouldn't he abuse his own child? An' I thot how different was father—So gentle, so kind, an' so mild.

I looked at the calf, 'twas a gaspin'. An' I took her poor head on my knee. Raised her up gently an' fed her. An' that's why she's gentle with me. She hates Jabez, but she loves him. An' some way I lost my respect. Then an' 'thar, in spite of his larnin' He brags an' his great intellect.

For a man o' his boasted knowledge To be so easy upset. Somehow I felt sort o' disgusted. An' I hadn't got over it yet! I wouldn't give a mill on the dollar For a man o' his smarter by half Than all the wise men in creation. If he'd abuse a poor little calf. BERNARD, Wis.

ORNAMENTS ON HATS.

Elaborate and Showy Millinery is the Rule for This Fall—Four Fashionable Styles.

HE millinery world certainly seems to be going ornamental. Within the memory of living woman there has not before prevailed such elaboration and showiness of ornamentation. The mock-jewel fad of the present season reaches its acme in the realm of hats, bonnets, and toques. As to design, everything that belongs either to earth or air is represented. There are also numerous ornaments which could not be clasped under the head of "given images," as they certainly are not—the likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or the earth beneath, or the waters under the earth. There are also jeweled cloths for crowns:

spider webs of jet and of gold on cloth, holding in their meshes insects with gleaming bodies representing precious stones, and with gauzy wings of brilliant metal.

The first illustration shows a hat with a low crown, over which are laid simple folds of velvet, the brim slightly shortened in the back, giving it a scoop effect. The material is velvet in the Stanley brown shade. A high, full bow of the brown velvet and golden-red yellow epeagle ribbon ornament the back. About the edge of the broad brim is a three-inch square between golden wires which is filled in with forget-me-nots in a golden-red yellow, so placed that they form a lace-like open edge.

The other hat in this same illustration is in black velvet, lace and jet. As felt was a fashionable material during the summer, lace will be worn during the winter. The brim of this hat is jetted in a delicate design and in the back is a high bunch of cock's feathers curving toward the front. This style is particularly becoming to a full, round face.

The Spanish turban shown in the second illustration is the essence of coquetry. Above the round, dimpling face of the girl with glancing eyes it is simply irresistible. The material is soft, gray-brown velvet, and gold and silver passementerie. The broad, soft crown is of the Tam O'Shanter shape and the close brim has a roll of velvet around the edge, with open spaces alternating with straps of velvet and passementerie extending from the edge to the crown.

The English round hat, which is the companion of the Spanish turban in the illustration, is a particularly becoming style. The wrinkled brim softens the effect about the hair and the six black tips in the back, with a broad-cut jet buckle at the side, gives it a stylish finish.

A member of the House of Commons had been paying attention to a young lady for a long time, and had taken her to the House until she was well posted in the rules. On the last day of that session, as they came out, he bought her a bouquet of flowers and said to her:

"May I offer you my handful of flowers?"

She replied promptly: "I move to amend by omitting all after the word 'hand'."

He blushing accepted the amendment, and they adopted it unanimously. —Pick-Me-Up.

A January Diary.

Old Gent—Well, my little son, did you try keepin' a diary, as I told you? Little boy—Yessir; here it is.

Old Gent looks over it and reads: Jan. 1—Went in swimming. Jan. 2—Went fishing. Jan. 3—Too hot to go anywhere. Jan. 4—Went and got some ice-cream.

Jan. 5—Guess I'll stop keepin' a diary. Too hot to write.—Street & Smith's Good News.

ASTONISHING success has attended the effort of Dr. Lannoe, an eminent specialist of Paris, to give intelligence to a little idiot girl. Though four years old, the child could neither walk nor stand, and never smiled nor took notice of anything. The doctor concluded that the brain was diseased, and in May last he made an incision in the center of the skull and cut a piece of bone from the left side of it. The result was marvelous. Within less than a month the child could walk, and she is now quite bright—playing, smiling, and taking notice of everything around her.

THE LITTLE FOLKS.

A Grievous Complaint.

"It's hard on a fellow, I do declare," said Tommy one day, with a pout: "In every one of us, I wear 'em. The pockets are most worn out. They're 'bout as big as the ear of a mole. And I never have more than three. And there's always comin' a mean little hole."

That loses my knife for me. "I can't make 'em hold but a few little things—"

Some cookies, an apple or two. A knife and pencil and bunch of strings. Some nails, and maybe a screw. And marbles, of course, and a top and ball. And shells and pebbles and such. And some odds and ends, yes, honest, that's all."

You may see for yourself 'tisn't much. "I'd like a suit of some patent kind, with pockets made wide and long; Above and below and before and behind. I'd want about a dozen or so. All easy and quick to get at; And I shall be perfectly happy, I know, With a handy key like that."

—St. Nicholas.

Birgale.

He is a saucy little red-tired, who finds his chief pleasure in eating, singing, fighting his mistress and tearing whatever paper he may chance to get hold of into pieces—in fact, he is never so happy as when in mischief. His personal appearance is not much in his favor. His head, with his black face, pink beak, two sharp little eyes, and short "toppy" or toponot, is stuck on a little round, red body about the shape of an apple-dumpling; and this body is supported by a pair of delicate-looking legs, which are continually carrying their owner to places where he has no business to be. A stubby and battered tail, with wings to match, complete the description.

But he is not ashamed of his looks; oh, no; not a bit of it! On the contrary, he appears to think that no one has as fine a coat or as pretty a topknot as the Master Birgale, and consequently is very vain of them, making his toilet three or four times a day, and more frequently if he gets the chance. And it is fortunate for his mistress that he does so, for it takes up some of his time, and when not engaged in that, or the equally pleasant occupation of eating and singing, he is certain to be doing something that he should not do.

He is very fond of bathing, and this fondness has not been acquired lately, either, for when Birgale was a youngster—which was but one short year ago—he thought nothing greater fun than to hop into a dish of water, and there kick and splash until not only he himself but also everything about him was completely drenched.

But not being allowed to bathe as often as he wished, he frequently got into trouble by attempting to steal a bath in liquids that were not intended for that purpose.

One day, auntie came in and found him seated in a cone of oatmeal and water (one of his favorite dishes) and just having a glorious time. But auntie brought his enjoyment to a speedy end, and it took many a washing in pure water to make Birgale's feathers as soft and smooth as they were before he starched them in oatmeal starch.

Another time he hopped into a big cup of warm coffee, but lost no time in scrambling out again. After bathing, Birgale often took it into his little head to try and fly up to the stove pipe, for the purpose of drying himself there. So he would nerve himself for the attempt, spread his wings, and give a grand yip; but that was all he did do, for as his wings were wet he always landed on the floor in a very humiliating manner. Then he would graciously permit us to pack him up in a little basket, and set him out in the sun or under the stove to dry.

All this sort of thing happened while Birgale was young, and, of course, not as wise and well-behaved as he is at present. Now when fresh water is given to him in his bath-tub he first sticks in one little foot and draws it out again, and then repeats the operation with the other, after which he hops in with both feet and proceeds to business.

But, as I've no doubt there are a number of you waiting to tell about your clever cats and dogs, chickens, horses, goats, and other animals, I will stop here and reserve the account of the remainder of Birgale's cunning tricks for some future time.—Detroit Free Press.

HONORING A GREAT POET.

A Bust of Sidney Lanier Unveiled at Macon, Ga.

The bust of Sidney Lanier, the distinguished Southern poet, given to the city of Macon by his brother, Charles Lanier, was unveiled in that city recently. The ceremony was attended by a large concourse of people, to whom the name of the dead poet is a household word. Sidney Lanier was but thirty-nine years of age when he died in 1881. He had enlisted in the Southern army at the breaking out of the war, and all through the campaigns in which he took part he occupied his leisure hours in the study of languages, music and poetry. He was captured by the Federals in December, 1864, and the hardships he endured as a prisoner of war brought on consumption, of which he ultimately died.

Many of his poems are worthy of a place among the classics, both because of their metrical perfection and the wealth of their imagery.

A French poet, who died in 1881, was sold in Paris for $100,000. The owner, by Charles XII, sold the bust of Pullover, brought over $100,000. A wig that once belonged to Sterne, the great English writer, was sold at public auction at London a few years ago for $1,050. In 1816 a tooth of Sir Isaac Newton was purchased by a nobleman for $3,650. The buyer had a costly diamond removed from his favorite ring and the tooth set in its place.
