Book Company Charges Answered.

Gov. LaFollette in a straight forward manner has made a reply to the charge that he received money of the independent book companies. While addressing an audience at Lancaster Friday he was interrupted by Dr. J. M. Lewis who asked the following question:

"Governor, will you not say a word about the charges made in connection with the book companies?" "It has never been my practice to make answer to personal attack. No man who assails corruption in the public service need hope to escape calumny and falsehoods."

"Whatever temporary harm a person experiences it tends most to injure those who engage in it. The people who are just will always judge righteously of public men as they will of public questions if given time enough to get at the truth, but in the brief weeks of this political campaign some men may be misled for the time being because of the use now being made of the statement published by the Messrs. Buckstaff and Stout."

"It would answer the purpose of those who prefer to be silent on railroad taxation to confine public attention for the next four weeks to the 'independent book companies' or any other subject, if it can possibly be done, but it will not be permitted by the people of Wisconsin. Most men in this state well understand the motives of the opponents of equal taxation and direct nomination in trying to make a campaign of personal abuse displace discussion of these issues."

"The attempt is being made to conduct this campaign chiefly upon the statement that Mr. Theodore Kronshage of Milwaukee received money from an 'independent book company' and forwarded the same to me to aid in paying the expenses of the pre-convention campaign. This pre-convention campaign of the Republican party required the printing and mailing of considerable portions of the proceedings of the last legislature, and other matters pertaining to the record of public officers in order to get the facts before the people relating to the repudiation of the platform pledges and to their re-election in state convention. The printing and mailing of these records and documents entailed large expense. This expense was not only legitimate, but it was incurred in a cause worthy of the support of any right-minded man. This was met by collection of such sums as friends of the cause in different locations were able to make in carrying of this party campaign."

"I didn't consider that campaign, nor was I informed as to its details. Had my public duties admitted of it, I was at no time able to have undertaken the work and the strain incident thereto. During the spring and summer I spent as much of the time as I was possible in the country and yet meet the demands of the office. These matters are stated because they are true, and in view of the false charges made, it is right they should be stated in this connection."

"I had absolutely no knowledge or information, either directly or indirectly, that Mr. Kronshage, or any other man proposed to contribute, or had contributed for campaign expenses any money, received from any 'independent book company' or any other book company, or from any company, partnership or corporation, either directly or through any individual acting for them, or either of them."

"From what I have since learned, I state emphatically that not one dollar was received, either directly or indirectly, by anyone connected with the conduct of the campaign at Madison was received upon any condition that any individual should be nominated or defeated upon the state ticket, or that any official should either then or thereafter show any favor or consideration to the contributor or any one else for the contribution. No such proposition was ever made by anyone or in any manner. Had any such contribution ever been offered then or thereafter whatever it would have been promptly refused by those who were conducting the campaign."

CHEAP AND COMMON

If you stop to consider you'll realize that cheapness cannot be carried beyond a certain limit without loss of quality. There's a fair price for a fair coffee. Every cut off that prices mean so much adulteration put into coffee. It's that way with drugs. Cheapness can be pushed over the line of safety. If you follow cheapness you'll get stale drugs or worthless medicines. You may be sure of the best drugs and the best skill and lowest prices consistent with quality and safety.
