THE reported secret meeting in Washington to organize a Blaine party in op-Blaine had nothing to do with it.

A GREENBACK state convention is to be held at Sparta, Wednesday, May 30, when a state ticket will probably be nominated. Colonel Reuben May, of Vernon county, is mentioned for Governor. Sam. Carey, of Ohio, is to address the convention.

For some reason or other the Democrats don't say much about running Mr. Tilden again as their candidate for President in 1880. They have picked out several candidates for the Republicans already, but they are silent about their own man.

THE President in a recent conversation very effectually squelched the story regarding his purpose of forming a new party, saying, in substance, that he had always been a Republican, is a Republican, and that the Republican party was never more necessary to the nation than it is to-day. That party was good enough for him, he said, and by it he ment to stand. That is a pretty emphatic confession of political faith.

The blame is thrown on Gen. Grant. If he had promptly recognized Messrs. Packard and Chamberlain, who were lawfully elected, says Mr. Morton, President Hayes would have kept them in place. Gen. Grant did not do this, and Mr. Hayes has simply accepted the situation bequeathed to him on the 4th of March. He characterized President Hayes' action as wise on the ground of Hayes' action as wise on the ground of protection of the French people; a government which finds itself compelled to disperse the representatives of the people at the very outset, and to prepare the representatives of the people at the very outset, and to prepare the representatives of the people at the very outset, and to prepare the representatives of the people at the very outset, and to prepare the representatives of the people at the very outset, and to prepare the representatives of the people at the very outset, and to prepare the very outset, and the very outset, and the very outset are the very outset. expediency, not of right.

France made Rome free; inevitable rather than to proceed only to inevitable defeat. The President's Rome now tries to enslave France. That the French people will not sustain such government with heartiness and unanimity, Bismarck knows well. To Southern policy is thus by inference him, moreover, whose conflict with the Church party in Germany has left some keen memories, this new rule in France seems the fruit of Jesuit plots, and its inevitable tendency hostility to Germany. That much if not all of this situation was foreseen, may be inferred from the remarkable speech of Moltke on the Army bill—a speech which startled Europe for the moment, but left no lasting impression only because Europe could see no sufficient occasion for it. Has Germany been waiting and preparing for precisely this opportunity, to deal with a French government which has not the hearty support of the French people, which can with difficulty sustain itself, and which may easily be regarded The Democratic majorities in the as a menace to theempire by which Jes
