

The Century Magazine.

WITH THE November, 1887, issue THE CENTURY commences its thirty-fifth volume with a regular circulation of almost 250,000. The War Papers and the Life of Lincoln increased its monthly edition by 100,000. The latter history having recounted the events of Lincoln's early years, and given the necessary survey of the political condition of the country, reaches a new period with which his secretaries were most intimately acquainted. Under the caption Lincoln in the War.

the writers now enter on the more important part of their narrative, viz.: the early years of the War and President Lincoln's part therein.

Supplementary War Papers. Following the "battle series" by distinguished generals, will describe interesting features of army life, tunneling from Libby Prison, narratives of personal adventure, etc. General Sherman will write on "The Grand Strategy of the War."

Kennan on Siberia.

Except the Life of Lincoln and the War Articles, no more important series has ever been undertaken by THE CENTURY than this of Mr. Kennan's. With the previous preparation of four years' travel and study in Russia and Siberia, the author undertook a journey of 15,000 miles for the special investigation here required. An introduction from the Russian Minister of the Interior admitted him to the principal mines and prisons, where he became acquainted with some three hundred State exiles—Liberals, Nihilists, and others—and the series will be a startling as well as accurate revelation of the exile system. The many illustrations by the artist and photographer, Mr. George A. Frost, who accompanied the author, will add greatly to the value of the articles.

A Novel by Eggleston

with illustrations will run through the year. Shorter novs will follow the Cable and Stock. Shorter fictions will appear every month.

Miscellaneous Features.

will comprise several illustrated articles on Ireland, by Charles De Kay; papers touching the field of the Sunday School, illustrated by E. L. Wilson; with Western life, by Theodore Roosevelt; the English Cathedral, by M. van Besselaer, with illustrations by Pennell; Dr. Baileys's valuable papers on Dreams, Spiritism, and Clairvoyance; essays in criticism, art, travel, and biography; poems; cartoons, etc. By a special offer the numbers for the past year (containing the Lincoln history) may be secured with the year's subscription from November, 1887, twenty-four issues in all, for $6.00 or, with the last year's numbers, for $7.50. Published by THE CENTURY CO., 33 East 17th Street, New York.

ST. NICHOLAS

For Young Folks.

SINCE its first issue in 1873, this magazine has maintained, with undisputed recognition, the position it took at the beginning—that of being the most excellent juvenile periodical ever printed. The best known names in literature were on its list of contributors from the start—Bryant, Longfellow, Thomas Hughes, George MacDonald, Bret Harte, Bayard Rustin, Frances Hodgson Burnett, James T. Fields, John G. Whittier; indeed the list is so long that it would be easier to tell the few authors of note who have not contributed to "the world's child magazine."

The Editor, Mary Mapes Dodge, author of "Hans Brinker," or "The Silver Skates," and other popular books for young folks,—and for grown-up folks,—has a remarkable faculty for knowing and entertaining children. Under her skillful leadership, ST. NICHOLAS brings to thousands of homes on both sides of the water knowledge and a delight.

St. Nicholas in England.

It is not alone in America that ST. NICHOLAS has made its great success. The London Times says: "It is above anything we produce in the same line." The Scotsman says: "There is no magazine that can successfully compete with it."

The Coming Year of St. Nicholas.

The fifteenth year begins with the number for November, 1887, and the publishers announce: Serial and Short Stories by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, Frank R. Stockton, H. H. Boyesen, Jos. Chandler Harris, J. T. Rowbridge, Col. Richard M. Johnston, M. A. De Young, Professor Alfred Church, Wm. H. Rideing, Washington Gladden, Harriet Prescott Spofford, Amelia E. Barr, Frances Christina Maynor, Harriet Lupton, and many others. Edmund Atton will write a series of papers on the "Routine of the Republic,"—how the President works at the White House, and how the affairs of the Treasury, the State and War Departments, etc., are conducted; Joseph O'Brien, a well known Australian journalist, will describe "The Great Island Continent"; Elizabeth Pennell will tell of "London Christmas Pantomimes" (Alice in Wonderland, etc.); John Burroughs will write "Meadow and Woodland Talks"; "Young Folks," etc., etc. Mrs. Burnett's short serial will be the editor's a worthy successor to her famous "Little Lord Fauntleroy," which appeared in ST. NICHOLAS.

Why not try ST. Nicholas this year for the young people in the house? Begin with the November number. Send us $1.00, or subscribe through booksellers and newsdealers. THE CENTURY CO., 33 East 17th Street, New York.

INEXPENSIVE LIVING.

How a Healthy Person Can Live and Grow Fat on a Dime a Day.

At the gathering of scientists in Columbia College a learned professor fascinated his superintending hearers by telling them that a laboring man "needs daily one-fourth pound of protein, one-fourth pound fat, and a pound of carbo-hydrates" to keep him well and strong. If the knowledge-seeking laborer goes to the store for his four ounces of protein he will find in the marketing knowledge of scientists. What the laborer and what most of us need more than technical essays on the "Physiological and Ecological Economy of Food" is a plain talk about sensible feeding and economical marketing.

"How to live and thrive on a dime per day" may stand as the text for this talk. It certainly can be done, and, though the experiment may be uninviting, it is certain that good health is nearer akin to the simplest diet than to the costliest.

Now as to the laboring man and his protegee. Tell him that three-fourths of his weight is water, and that to restore the day's waste he has to take food, three-fourths of which must be water, and the remainder flesh-forming, heat-giving and bone-making substances, he will understand the case better. Give him a table of foods, analyzed to show just how much heat-giving, flesh-forming and mineral matter there is in each food, and he will soon take as deep an interest in what he eats because of its worth to him as because of its taste. When he finds out—as he can in half an hour—that only twenty-four parts in every hundred of butcher's meat count as flesh-formers, the rest being water, but that from seventy-five to ninety parts out of every hundred in dried peas, beans, oat and wheat meals and cheese are nutritious, and only ten to twenty-five parts waste water, he from that moment begins to use his common sense in feeding as he does in earning his living. The popular rule is: Never pay any heed to the feeding value of our diet; let us cultivate a glorious ignorance of the purpose of foods and go in might and main for palate-ticklers and dyspepsia.

Just a fact or two as appetizers. The great Peninsular and Oriental (P. & O.) Steamship Company employ East Indian coolies to do the hardest work on their steamers because they are stronger, healthier and stand the climate better than Englishmen, and because not being meat eaters—their diet costs only six cents per day. There are miners in the English coalpits, the hardest workers in the land, who have not eaten any kind of meat for years. I am not a vegetarian, because I hank'r after the flesh pots, and their savory odors cast a spell over my innocent soul; yet I experimented for one whole year without tasting flesh or gravy in any form, and all the time my health was perfect and my weight increased. The dock porters of Constantinople carry heavier burdens—two hundred and fifty pounds and upward—more easily than the laborers of England and America, yet their main diet is bread and figs, and they are teetotal and vegetarian. The laborers in Spain live chiefly on bread and onions, and are marvelously strong.

The flesh-and-blood superstition is baseless. A horse is almost as strong, swift, healthy and handsome as a two-legged man, and they both have the same internal machinery; the one eats beef and enjoys dyspepsia; the other avoids it and flourishes. Ten cents' worth of meat, oatmeal, rice, fruits, buttermilk, bread, cheese, onions or portions of several of these, will enable a man to do his ordinary day's work at least as well as any assortment of goods he can buy for a dollar.

What would be a good diet for those who do not need to study their purses, yet who would like a simple, healthy and enjoyable diet? To such I would say drop the heavy meat breakfast right away. Not that meat is bad, but it is not the best to start the day on. Bread (not the spoiled white stuff, but the natural dark-colored wheat, as ground), tea or cocoa, eggs and the hundred and one non-flesh dishes, with a little fish, and as much fruit as you like. That's a model meal, as experience will prove.

Talking of fish, the more the better. Pound for pound it is as nutritious as flesh, though it doesn't seem to fill us so fully, and its chemical value is far above that of meats. When I have extra hard brain work to do, say an average of twelve or fourteen hours for two or three weeks at a stretch, I knock off meats entirely and eat all the fish I can. Result, perfect health and strength and no headaches.

For dinner, fish, soups (I am not excluding meat, though soups can be made without it that taste just the same and are quite as good every way), puddings, desserts.

I knew an eminent lady who for forty years had never tasted meat. She was a marvel of mental and physical strength. Another author friend kept his health and his average weight of one hundred and sixty pounds on a diet that never included meat, the average cost of his food being only six cents per day. Another well-known literary man, who looked as beefy as a butcher, was, when I last met him, in his eightieth year of strict abstinence from flesh. Another friend, a hard literary worker, has been practically a life-long vegetarian, but he looks too shriveled up to be a champion specimen.—Richmond (Va.) Dispatch.
