THE NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD.

Arrival of the Exploring Party at St. Paul.

NAMES OF THE MEMBERS—PLANS FOR FUTURE ACTION.

Expected to Reach St. Cloud To-Morrow—Preparations for their Reception.

From yesterday's St. Paul Press we learn that the exploring party which is to inspect the route of the Northern Pacific Railroad from Lake Superior to the Missouri River, arrived in that city on Tuesday evening. It is composed as follows:

Hon. J. Gregory Smith, President of the Northern Pacific Railroad, Vermont.
Hon. R. D. Rice, director of do, Maine.
Hon. W. C. Smith, M. C., Vermont.
Hon. F. Woodbridge, ex-M. C., Vermont.
Rev. Dr. W. H. Lord, Vermont.
Dr. S. W. Thayer, Vermont.
C. C. Coffin (Carleton of the Boston Journal,) Boston.
E. F. Johnson, Chief Engineer of the Northern Pacific, Conn.
A. B. Bayless, New York.
Mr. Holmes, agent of Jay Cooke & Co., New York.
Jas. Stinson, Chicago.
Jas. Coleborn, Maine.
Hon. Wm. Windom, Winona.
John Douglas, Winona.

The party will visit Minneapolis to-day, and to-morrow will come to St. Cloud by special train, arriving about eleven o'clock in the forenoon. From here they will proceed to Fort Abercrombie and Georgetown, by the regular stage road up the Sauk Valley, thus personally becoming acquainted with one of the finest sections of country in the State. The Press says: "The original programme was that at this point Mr. Holmes—the representative of Jay Cooke—and a few others, were to continue the exploration through to the Great Bend of the Missouri, while Gov. Smith and the rest were to return to St. Paul, but last evening it was about determined that the whole party would proceed to the Missouri."

Gen. Sherman has furnished Gov. Smith with an order for a military escort, which will probably be furnished at Forts Abercrombie and Totten.—Mr. George Brackett, of Minneapolis, is to supply the necessary transportation and supplies, and is himself to accompany the expedition. Pierre Bottineau, the traditional cicerone of every exploring expedition in this region since the days of Nicollet, is to act as the guide of this one also. The Northern Pacific Railroad Company is fortunate in having secured the invaluable services of Mr. C. C. Coffin, who under the nom de plume of "Carleton" has achieved so wide a celebrity as the traveling correspondent of the Boston Journal—as the historiographer of the expedition. Mr. Coffin has long been an enthusiastic advocate of the Northern Pacific Railroad and as long ago as 1858 published a pamphlet on this subject under the title of "The Great Commercial Prize" which enlisted general attention at the time.

If all the party go through to the Great Bend of the Missouri, the trip will occupy them, doubtless, two or three months. If they separate at the Red River, Gov. Smith and his companions will return and go to Duluth, and perhaps to Bayfield.

Concerning the intentions of the party, the Press says:

We are happy to learn from leading members of the expedition that the return of the party with the favorable report which the nature of the country makes inevitable is to be the signal for an immediate commencement of the work at the eastern end of the line—and we were assured that it is extremely probable that the line will be completed through Minnesota before the end of 1870.

The route of the road through Minnesota is not yet determined on—but there is, we are happy to say—a favorable leaning toward ST. CLOUD as the point where the line will cross the Mississippi. The initial point of the work will be near Black Hoof, on the Superior road, some forty miles above Chengwatana—there or thereabout—and from this point a branch road is to diverge to Superior city. Mr. James Stinson, of Chicago, who accompanies the expedition, is interested in the last mentioned branch road.

Major Brackett will bring up the supplies and transportation on to-morrow's special train.

The following dispatch was received by Mayor Taylor:

ST. PAUL, July 7th, 11 A. M.
To Oscar Taylor, Mayor of St. Cloud.
Gov. Smith, President of the Northern Pacific R. R. Co. and party will come up Friday morning on special train. Should reach your city about eleven o'clock and will remain only to dinner.
GEO. L. BECKER.

T. C. McClure, Esq., also received this dispatch yesterday:

MINNEAPOLIS, July 7th, 1869.
T. C. McClure.—Our party will be at St. Cloud next Friday night.
WM. S. PECK.

The joint committee of the City Council and Board of Trade, consisting of Mayor Taylor and Alds. Burbank, Kerr, Clark and Evans, and Messrs. W. S. Moore, T. C. McClure, E. O. Hamlin, C. F. Davis and N. P. Clark, met yesterday evening to perfect arrangements for the reception of the party, and organized by electing Hon. C. F. Davis Chairman. Owing to the conflicting character of the dispatches, a telegram was sent for further details, but up to the time of this writing no reply has been received. The probability is that quite a large party will come up in the noon train, and all go back again that day but the exploring party, who will remain here a day or two and then continue their journey. Our citizens are anxious to give them the heartiest reception possible.

—Three times three for the Northern Pacific Railroad!

HON. C. T. BROWN, lately appointed Chippewa Indian Agent, has been superseded by Capt. J. T. Hassler, of the regular army. Mr. B. gave promise of making an efficient officer, and his many friends will regret that he had possession of the office for so short a time.

WE see it stated that Mrs. Major Dr. Mary E. Walker has at length secured the promise of a clerkship in the Treasury Department. Perseverantia omnia &c.

VIRGINIA ELECTION.

The election on Tuesday passed off quietly. The indications are that Walker is elected Governor by almost fifteen thousand majority. Although a Republican, he headed what was known as the Conservative ticket—the difference between the two candidates being their position concerning enfranchisement. The Constitution, with the objectionable clauses expurgated, is adopted by an overwhelming majority. Norton, a colored man, has been elected to Congress.

ON the 8th of May last while the Colorado exploration party of Major Powell were attempting to cross the Colorado river about twenty rods above the rapids, all were drowned. They had started in a small boat—the Major and twenty men—and when some thirty yards from shore, the boat entered the vortex and all were engulphed. A man named John Residon, left on shore with the teams and baggage, was the sole survivor, and he arrived at Omaha on the 2d inst. None of the bodies were found.

—A letter from Mrs. Powell since published, brands this report as untrue. She says she had a letter from her husband May 28th.

DISCUSSING the different features of State politics, the Lake City Leader says that Mr. Donnelly "has a hold upon the affections of the people of Minnesota that few men in public life attain. He has earned it by faithful devotion to the people, and their regard for him is not weakened by the feeling that injustice was done him last fall, nor by the knowledge of the fact that while scores of Congressmen serving with him got rich, Donnelly came out poor."

It gives the politicians this piece of advice:

The surest way for any of you to climb high on the political ladder is to all take hold together and boost Donnelly up to the top round out of your way.

TO THOSE who wish to secure a publication affording a great variety of choice reading matter, we would recommend Every Saturday, issued in weekly and monthly parts by Ticknor & Fields, Boston, Mass. It is made up entirely from foreign periodicals. The weekly part now before us contains the following: "American Feeling towards England;" "Tom Butler," continued; "The Trade in Locks;" "Jinny's Three Balls;" "Mr. Leland's Wit and Humor;" "Down among Dead Gods;" "The Comforters of the Modern Job;" "The Mutiny at Vellore;" "On a Bicycle;" "Foreign Notes."

THE Public Debt Statement for July shows a decrease of over sixteen millions of dollars. Secretary Boutwell reports that the National Debt has been reduced since March 1st, in the amount of Thirty-six Millions Four Hundred and Sixty Thousand Four Hundred and Seventy-nine Dollars. Although a part of this sum came from miscellaneous sources, such as the sale of war vessels, the result is gratifying beyond expectation. The Assistant Treasurer at New York will buy $3,000,000 of government bonds on Saturday.

A STATE exchange says: "The statement made to the Leader, Lake City, by Mr. Sam. Doughty, in regard to raising apples, which is being published in every paper in the state, may do for Lake City, but the recommendations won't answer in most any other part of Minnesota. Trees of every species of the apple should be trained low instead of high as Mr. Doughty says. This we know by actual experience, and Mr. Doughty's experience, as far as we can learn, is an isolated one. In this statement we are backed by such men as Peter M. Gideon, John S. Harris, Wyman Elliot, Amasa Stewart, J. T. Grimes, and other nurserymen, who have produced and raise apples. They all recommend trees to be trained low."

THE Blue Earth City Post states that Senator George Potter, of Houston county—generally known as the "Industrious Flea"—has been appointed a member of the Washington City Metropolitan Police! "Ye gods and little fishes!" what a terrible sight for evil doers.

WENDELL PHILLIPS demands a Peter the Great for the South. Gen. Grant, he thinks, is too mild, and his policy will be a long time in securing to loyalists below Mason & Dixon's line protection in life and property. He says the rebels there need to feel the unrelenting hand of a despot.

THE Duluth Minnesotian suggests the name of Mr. Lewis Lewiston, late Register of the Alexandria Land Office, as a Scandinavian candidate for State Treasurer. Mr. L. is a gentleman of considerable influence among his countrymen.

—The ladies of Waverly, N. Y., walked in the middle of the streets in a temperance procession the other night.

This is doubtless to be considered as an evidence of "progress."

—The very latest style is to have rose colored wedding cards.

It is generally supposed that everything about that time appears couleur de rose.

—Young America is one of the most popular of juvenile publications; there is a variety that satisfies even the desire of children for novelty. One of its very best features is the interest it excites in children, by allowing them to appear as correspondents in its columns. Published at 838 Broadway, New York.

—Mrs. Daniel Bean and two hundred and sixty-two other ladies of the town of Warner, New Hampshier, have sent a protest to the Legislature against the extension of the right of suffrage to women.

—The Czar of Russia, who is in poor health, goes to the Crimea to recuperate.

LETTER FROM THE SOUTH.

A Cold-Blooded Murder—Terrible Retribution—One Man Commits Suicide and Two Others are Lynched.

From Our Regular Correspondent.

NEW ATHENS COLLEGE,
GREENSBURG, GREEN Co., KY.
June 26, 1869.

EDITOR JOURNAL.—The papers teem with so many sensational items, that I have not much inclination to add to the list in the columns of THE JOURNAL, but one has recently occurred here, in this county, of so tragical a character that I will give it as nearly as I can.

About five miles from town lived an old man, alone, except a negro man and woman who occupied a cabin on the same place, near the old man's residence. The old man's wife was dead and his children were married and had left him. It was known that he had five hundred dollars in his house, and had had it there for more than a year. His expenses were small, for his wants were few; and the money, which was in gold, was kept locked up in a trunk under his bed.

I passed by the house the other day. It is in a remote corner of the county, in a sparcely settled neighborhood, and on an untraveled road. It is an old hewn log house, about forty feet long, with rock chimneys, built up at each end, on the outside, and a long portico, with rude pillars supporting it; after the fashion of large numbers of old farm houses in Kentucky. The house is surrounded with a forest of fruit trees, and is embowered in a profusion of ornate trees of every variety. To the eye of the passer-by it presents the appearance of an old, but charming retreat. Here, in his bed—with no soul in the house but the gray haired old man, he was brutally murdered; his body mutilated in a shocking manner, and left upon the floor. The trunk was broken open, the money abstracted, an old quilt was thrown over the dead body, and the door locked.

The next day the negroes discovered the door locked, and all silent in the old man's dwelling. But soon the neighbors, forcing an entrance into the house, were shocked at finding the old man on the floor with pools of blood around the dead body.

For weeks no clue could be found to the murderer. There was, as is usual in such cases, tremendous excitement in the neighborhood, but no one was suspected until three weeks afterwards, when a son-in-law of the murdered man who had been on the watch, fixed upon three men, all young men, and they were arrested and lodged in jail here to await trial.

When they had been in jail ten days a rumor spread that it was the intention of some of the old man's relations to take the prisoners out and deal unto each, summary punishment. The jailor was informed of it, and the prisoners somehow got word of the dreadful fate that possibly might overtake them.—All, however, soon became quiet; the rumor died away; and no one thought any more of it, supposing it to be the result of harmless threats, which would end there.

But not so.—It was a clear, calm, moonlight night. The town was buried in deep sleep, and the jailor had suspended precaution, and was, like the rest of his neighbors, enjoying his night's repose. On this beautiful night, at precisely two o'clock, eight men headed by the son-in-law, a lawyer of Campbellsville, in the adjoining county of Taylor, came noiselessly into the town, filing two by two past the Court House, and surrounded the jail. The jail is a two-story stone building, out of the business part of the town, and the jailor resides with his family in the same building. Having silently placed his men in their places around the building, and doing all in such profound silence as not to waken the sleeping family of the jailor, the son-in-law stepped to the window, and called the attention of the astonished jailor to the situation of affairs, and demanded that the prisoners should be given up to him. The jailor resolutely refused to open the door, when in a twinkling it was riddled and the main entrance filled with strange men in disguise. The jailor being kept in his room, the work of breaking into the prisoners' room was but that of an instant. One of the prisoners, seeing the terrible destiny that awaited him, seized a razor which he had with him, cut his own throat, and expired while they were tying the other two.

They took them out of jail; put them on horses, just out of town; hurried them twelve miles to the neighborhood of Campbellsville, and hung both upon the same tree, where they were found next morning near the main road swinging to and fro in the morning air. A confession was made by one of them, after the rope was on his neck; so that no doubt was left of the guilt of the men who thus suddenly perished from the earth, for the cold-blooded murder they had committed upon an innocent, unresisting old man, in the darkness of night. As they took the night to take life, so in the stillness of night they lost their own, by the hands of those whose names and faces they could never know.

ION,

—Rumors of the resignation of Secretary Rawlins are again received. He also desires to retire on account of ill health. The President is, however, loth to dispense with his services, and it is, therefore, contemplated to grant him a leave of absence for six months, and to appoint a Secretary ad interim.
