THE NEW SYSTEM OF SLAVERY.

The report of STEADMAN and FULLERTON is published at Washington. It will make a profound sensation in political circles, as it charges, by implication, that the Freedmen's Bureau is but another system of negro slavery. The report is lengthy, and we regret that our space will admit of but an extract or two. After stating that after the cessation of hostilities, the Bureau did good, they say:

Before the close of 1865, there was an entire revolution in the sentiments of the people of the South with regard to negro labor. A feeling of kindness sprung up towards the freedmen, resulting, perhaps, mainly from the conviction that his labor was desirable and profitable, and the only labor to be had. The necessity of the Bureau had ceased. Since then, while it has been beneficial in some localities, it has been productive in the aggregate of more harm than good. It has occasioned and will perpetuate discord so long as it exists, though administered by the wisest men of the nation.

Every man in the South knows that it will perpetuate "discord," and that is precisely what the authors of the late bill expect it to do. This is the truth in a nut shell.

The freedmen regard its presence as evidence that they would be unsafe without it; and the white people consider it an imputation upon their integrity, an espionage upon the official action of all their courts and magistrates, as well as upon the private conduct of their citizens. Both races are thus made suspicious and bitter by an agency which, in the present disorganized condition of civil government and society in the Southern States, is powerless to advance the interests of either.

If the following passage does not make out a case of slavery, we cannot comprehend the meaning of language:

The best protection the freedman has in the South is the value of his labor in the market, and if he is left free to dispose of this at all times to the highest bidder, unshackled by contracts made for him by Bureau officers, no apprehensions need be felt for his safety or his success. If the freedman could at this moment demand the wages which the high price of the products of the South would justify, one dollar per day and board would be the ruling wages, instead of ten or twelve dollars per month, the prices now paid. But they cannot take advantage of the demand for their labor. They are bound by contracts and enslaved for twelve months through the agency and influence of the Freedmen's Bureau.

After the boast and glorification over the abolition of slavery, it is not strange that the negro is not free to act for himself, but must submit to whatever disposition the Bureau may make of his person?

They say in conclusion that if the freedman leaves for the North to seek employment at better wages, he is arrested as a vagrant by order of the Freedmen's Bureau, and put to labor on the roads with ball and chain, as is provided by an order recently issued by General Scott, Assistant Commissioner for South Carolina. If fatigued from overwork he desires to rest for a day, if he leaves the plantation to visit a relative or friend, it is made a penal offense and a fine of $50 is imposed; if he refuses to contract he is arrested by the Bureau pro rata marshal and sold for a few dollars to the nearest planter. The coercive policy adopted by the Bureau in this and other respects, has been made a justification for the discriminating legislation of some of the Southern States.

THE DUTY OF THE HOUR.

War is the grand demoralizer of our race. Civilization and religion flourish under the benign influence of peace but to be turned back in the fell hour of war. How proudly we build the temple to education, to religion and virtue! How glad the heart is to see the broad country blooming with plenty, and glance round a horizon undotted with a single sign of commotion! We preach sermons on the beauty of peace, and know no terms too extravagant to be applied to public and private virtue. We cultivate the soft and elegant arts until ambition prompts us to rival the achievements of Nature itself. We soften and etherealize the manners, and effect

"To lay our own advantage by To seek our neighbor's good." We recognize the truth that peace is the normal condition of man, and almost forget that his bosom contains other elements than those that reside in the interest of amity and good will. Suddenly as the sky changes, we change, all human affairs change. The iron and steel with which we fashion the beautiful structures, change their forms. From that in which they turned the clouds of the valley and buried the prolific seed, they are shaped to the uses of destruction. The huge cannon ball and shell are moulded, and the glittering saber and bayonet are fashioned. The business of life is subjected to a complete transformation. In war, the policy is to destroy that which a state of peace had erected. Country, cities, art, commerce, are assailed. Nothing is too sacred, too beautiful to resist the first passions of war. Desolation is bolted abroad amid the shouts of victory on one hand and tears and anguish on the other. The courtly demeanor of man is gone, as the round devil of his nature stalks through the sulphurous clouds of battle. Tender friendships are withered, and hate takes their place. Those upon whom the honest heart had been accustomed to rely, forsake it and lay snares for its destruction. Accustomed to the work of demolition, the mind comes at last to conclude that war is right, and that nothing which peace had forbidden is wrong. Religion, where men are hewn down by the acre, is not respected. Accustomed to look upon the corpse of a human being with indifference, the idea of future accountability loses its force, and yields to those passions which had been kept in subjection by it. Demoralization ensues. Then comes crime in every phase in which it is possible for it to appear. Our war left both sections at the mercy of a vast number of desperate men, while many thousands were, it is feared, hopelessly depraved. The business of the hour is to hasten with all dispatch the return of the people to their former virtue. Religion must do its great work. It is the country's first and last reliance. It has its auxiliaries, and they must all be marshalled to the work.

GO SLOW.
The Journal believes that it has not predicted, as a consequence of the success of the DUFFAL party, a single evil that will not come upon our people. It declares that Kentucky will yet "bitterly rue and deeply curse the unnatural and deplorable work of Monday." The Journal expects and predicts evil as a consequence of Monday's vote being interpreted in the North as an evidence of a disloyal spirit on the part of Kentucky, and of an intention to revive secession.

—Louisville Courier.
Is the loyal sentiment of the North so sensitive that the people of the South must speak in whispers, move with the stealthy step of a cat, and dwarf themselves into proportions that can command nothing but contempt? We don't see that there is anything in the election of DUFFAL at which the North has any right to take offense? If the people of Kentucky had a right to elect a clerk, certainly the people of the North had no right to dictate to them as to the proper person for the office. We hate that subservient which induces men, when transacting their own business matters, to do it with reference to the effect the act may produce upon the minds of those whom they fear or flatter. As to the effect that election will have upon the Radicals, we think it will be most salutary. It will teach them that the people despise and defy them. As to the Conservatives, they are not likely to rush into the arms of the Radicals because a State has wiped that party out from its borders. Glorious result, is that in Kentucky. From forty to fifty thousand majority!

AMERICAN SILVER.

The Montreal papers are making some complaint, says the Philadelphia Ledger, about the extensive circulation of American silver in Canada. They say that this money has driven bank notes out of circulation in the towns, and they are now almost exclusively in the hands of the country people, "and the danger is the greater in case of any sudden alarm or revolution." It is so long since we have laid eyes on a silver currency that we almost forget what its effect was upon the paper currency, but we don't think any one here would complain if silver and gold once more came back to us.

A SLANDER.

The Louisville Courier thus refutes what was intended to be a damaging slander: We see that the slanderous statement that when the name of Gen. SHERMAN was mentioned, by one of the Democratic speakers, at the meeting on Saturday night, there was a general hissing is traveling the rounds of the papers. We desire for once and for all, to brand the statement as a groundless and dirty falsehood. We were present at the meeting, and heard nothing of the sort. The slander is about on a par with the whole course of the opposition towards the Democratic party during the whole canvass.

FROM EUROPE.

Congratulatory Address to the King of Prussia—His Response—Object of the War—The King's Address to the Prussian Chambers—Peace Between Austria and Prussia Anticipated—Hostilities with Italy Protracted—Thirty Million Francs for a Railroad—Champion Prize Fight—Jim Mace Winner.

By the Ocean Cable.

LONDON, August 7.—The King of Prussia has returned to Berlin. The municipality presented to him a congratulatory address. In reply the King expressed his thanks. He pointed out that Prussia had drawn the sword, not only for her independence, but for the reorganization of Germany. The first, the King said, had been assured. The second may, with the help of God, be also obtained. Every thing promises a happy future for Prussia as an honorable and lasting peace is imminent.

The King in person opened the Prussian Chambers yesterday. The following is his speech in full: Illustrious nobles and loyal gentlemen of both Houses of the Diet: Now that I see gathered around me the Representatives of the country, my heart impels me to express first of all from this place my own and my people's thanks for God's gracious goodness which has enabled us to take part in any such disorganizing and revolutionary proceedings. The scheme, therefore, cannot at present be carried out with the slightest pretense of legality.

But the next Congress will present an entirely different question. There is very little doubt that the Republican party will lose one representative in consequence of the late election. Not more than two of them will be re-elected. No members have yet been elected in Texas. Four secessionists will appear for that reconstructed State next winter. Thus, at the opening of the fourth Congress, 117 persons claiming seats in the House will certainly be prepared to support Mr. Johnson's policy. If he can only carry five more he will have a clear majority of those whom he will consider lawfully elected to the lower branch of Congress. Now it is very probable that, in addition to those losses which we have before mentioned, the Republicans will lose one member in Connecticut (Mr. Hubbard), two in New York (Messrs. Humphrey and Ketchum), two in Pennsylvania (Messrs. Thayer and Miller), two in Ohio (Messrs. Ashley and Hubbell), one in Indiana (Mr. Harding), ten in Illinois (Mr. Sawyer), ten in all; while it is not certain but that five or six other seats may be lost. Taking, however, these seats as the basis of calculation, it will be seen that the probable loss of 28 members, though it would leave a Republican majority of about 40 in the House of Representatives, as at present (113 Republicans to 71 Johnsonians), would yet give the Johnson party 127 members out of 242, in case the Southern delegations were admitted.

If the present programme is carried out, the Southern representatives will insist upon their right to vote Speaker at the commencement of the next Congress. The Clerk will not call their names; and the plan meditated is for the 55 excluded Southerners, elect a temporary chairman in place of the Clerk, choose a Speaker, and apply to the President for recognition, is, of course, to be given, and the unrecognized House to be forcibly ejected.

We need not say that such conduct would lead to the instant impeachment of the officials concerned in it, if the majority of the lawful representatives were allowed to meet anywhere, and that the President would, as a matter of course, refuse to acknowledge the validity of the proceedings. This would equally, as a matter of course, bring about a conflict of authority, the decision of which by the Senate would be an unavailing to prevent an appeal to force. If convicted by two thirds of the court of impeachment, as now constituted, the President would still deny the validity of the sentence, the twenty-two Southern Senators being excluded, and the issue would be left to the decision of arms.

If the new coalition carries 93 of the 184 undisputed seats in Congress, Mr. Johnson's term will be as good as completed; or if it fails to prevent the election of 122 Republicans, he may abandon the hope of success in the struggle wherein he can have no pretense of legality on his side; but we think the former alternative highly improbable, and the latter almost impossible. The only remaining prospect, unless the courage of one party or the other fails at the last moment, is civil war.

The disadvantages of the loyal North in such an event must not be denied or underrated. The South would have, in such a struggle, exactly the position which, if it had taken it in 1860, would have insured its triumph. It would undertake to crush a divided North in the name of the Federal Government. It would fight its battles in the name of the United States, and with the sanction of a self-styled Federal Congress. It would have an equal chance for recognition by all foreign powers. It would have the power of the North, especially in the States where the local administration might be in the hands of Johnson men.

On the other hand, it is a favorable circumstance that the Governor of every Northern State is now a Republican, and that the only Governors who can possibly be displaced by Democrats within the next year (except in case of death) are those of Connecticut, New York and Pennsylvania. The bulk of the Northern States, therefore, as far as their executive authorities are concerned, will certainly co-operate with Congress. The militia would be placed under its control, and in the absence of a large standing army, this would be an immense advantage.

Notice to the Public.
IN THE YEAR 1860, THE WRITER EMbarked in the drug business in the city of Philadelphia, and within a brief space of time, several experiments in regard to the most desirable mode of preparing Fluid Extracts. My efforts being successful, the articles were improved and used by the Medical Faculty—I was desirous of placing them before the public, but hesitated for some time, as they were contrary to the prevailing opinion of friends and those who had used them this objection was overcome.

After eighteen years' experience, commencing in a small way, the belief of my articles has extended to all parts of the United States, and widely throughout foreign countries—and this in the face of the competition of the means has been resorted to by unprincipled dealers since their merit and success have been known—such as adulteration, and the use of cheap copying my advertisements—but I am happy to state that the use of my articles has been extended to all parts of the United States, and widely throughout foreign countries—and this in the face of the competition of the means has been
