ONSIDER THE LILIES OF THE FIELD. UNIVERSITY PRICE POSE, ST W. M. MELIS, S. A O, weary child of toll and care, Tremoting at avery cloud that lewers, Come and behold how pearing fair Thy God hath made the flowers.

From every hillside's sunny slope. From every forest's loafy shade. The flowers sweet messengers of Hops. Bid thee "Be not afraid."

The Wind flower blossoms in yorder bower, All hee tless of to-morrow's stora; Nor tremb as for the coming shower The Lity's stately form.

No busy shut-le plied to de-k With senset times the blu-hing Rose; And little does the Harsbell reck Of toil and all its woos.

The Water Lily, pure and white, Floats idly on the summer stream: Se ming almost toe fair and bright For aught but poot's dream.

The gorgeous Tulip, thouch arrayed
In rold and sems, knows naught of care;
The Violet in the mossy glade,
Of labor hath no chare.

They toil not, yet the Lily dyes Phoesicien fabries far surpass; Nor India's rarest gem outvies The little Biue-eyed Grass.

For God's own band bath clothed the flowers With fairy form and rainbow hue: Bath nur ured them with sunny showers, And watered them with dew.

To-day, a thousand blossoms fair, From sunny stope or sheltered glade, With strateful incense fill the air, To-morrow they shall fade. But thou shalt live when sinks in night You g orious sun; and shall not He Who hath the flowers so richly dight, Much rather care for thee?

O, faithless murmurer! thou mayest read A lesson in the lowly sod; Heaven will sunply thine every need; Fear not, but tru-t in God.

Honors to Commodore M. F. Maury. On the occasion of the installation of

On the occasion of the installation of Commodore Maury as a Professor in the Virginia Military Institute, heretofore alluded to, General F. H. Smith, the Superintendent of the Institute, made the following complimentary allusion to Virginia's distinguished son:

The name of Maury is a household word among the people of this, his native State—Virginia. Entering the United States navy when a mere boy, from Tennessee, the State of his adoption, he served in the navy with honorable distinction for upwards of thirty five years. When still a young man, he published a valuable treatise on navigation, which When still a young man, he published a valuable treatise on navigation, which was used for many years as a text book in the navy. His special qualifications prompted the Government to place him in charge of the National Observatory at Washington; and it was in this position that his first and highest distinctions were won. Collating the logs of the merchantmen as they traversed the ocean, he constructed those wonderful charts and sailing directions which are now used by every maritime nation, and which have contributed so much to the trade and commerce of the world.

In his "Physical Geography of the Sea," which founded, in the language of Sea, which founded, in the language of the great Humboldt, a "new department of science," he unfolds the mysteries of the mighty deep, and presents the pro-cesses by which he was led to other dis-coveries, resulting finally in demon-strating the practicability of ocean tele-

The civilized world promptly recognised the value of these great discoveries. The Universities of Europe and America conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. Two Soldiers Killed by a Citizen.

Two soldiers Killed by a Citizen.

From the Weso (Texas) Examiner.]

By private advices from Austia we learn that two United States soldiers were killed near that city the other night by Mr. McGuire, a citizen. A small squad of soldiers, in search of an offunder who was supposed to be alceping in the residence of Mr. McGuire, were advancing upon the house. Hearing the neing upon the house. Hearing the un-namal noise, Mr. McGuirs sprang from his bed and demanded "who comes there?" "United States soldiers," was there?" "United States soldiers," was the reply. Having been on a previous occasion robbed by a party claiming the same honorable distinction, Mr. McGui-re now peremptorily ordered the party to halt. No attention being paid to this repeated demand, Mr. McGuire fired at them, and dropping his gun flee, for dear life. Having aroused several of his neighbors, he returned to arrest the supposed robbers; but, in addition to finding his bouse in flames, was himself arrested by the soldiers.

ing his house in flames, was himself arrested by the soldiers.

Two of their number had been killed by the single discharge of McGuire's gue, and it was not unnatural that, in the exasperation of the moment, they should burn the house. McGuire, we take pleasure in station, has been a consistent Union man, and is now a double rectified Radiesl.
