THE TEXAS FRONTIER.

Massacre of a Family by Indians—A Horrible Story.

A gentleman by the name of T. L. Stanfield, writing from Montague, Texas, to the Dallas Herald, says: "Last Friday, with a couple of companions, I started from the pleasant little village of Decatur to this place, about two o clock p.m. We jogged along until about one hour after night, when we arrived at the residence of William Freeman, an old pioneer, where we spent a cheerful night and again pursued our journey.

We had not traveled further than a mile when we received the sad intelligence that a family had been massacred about two miles above. We hastened on to the place of the awful tragedy, and may God forbid that my eyes should ever again look upon such another scene as I there witnessed. The first victim was a little boy, some eight or ten years old, some forty yards from the house, stone dead. His left arm was cut from his body, exhibiting to full view his heart and lungs, his bowels cut out, and then scalped. We then repaired to the house, and the first victim that met our gaze, near beside the entrance, was a girl about nine or ten years old, wrapped, or rather thanbled, in a mass of old bed-clothes, etc., with one naked hand and arm elevated. I took hold of her hand, but to find that one naked hand and arm elevated.

took hold of her hand, but to find that she, too, was dead and wounded in several places. Next was a lady, some sixty years of ago, by the name of Keenan, shot through her breast, with two arrows that passed through her body. Daily through train to Nashville and Chattanooga without change of cars. Leaves at 7:45 p.m.; arrives in Nashville at 9 a.m., Chattanooga at 7:10 p m., next day.
