EX-PRESIDENT JOHNSON'S SPEECH.

The popularity of Andrew Johnson was fairly tested in Memphis last evening. Out of a thousand citizens who listened to his threadbare speech, about one hundred applauded the sentiments expressed by the great Commoner. His of the family-nominally and actually, reception in Memphia was anything but an ovation, nor was he received by the representative men of the city. A few personal friends, and a little knot of defeated politicians, who just now believe it popular to rail at conventions, clustered around him; and it must have been apparent to Mr. Johnson that whatever adventitions popularity he ever had in West Tennessee has long since departed. tion on national politics, into which was John Trevor, who set an example to Grant as a gift-taker. Mr. Johnson commented on the public debt-the rights of bloody military commission - the spurning of Miss Surratt from the door of the Executive mansion; and the crimsoned curtain fell on the Johnsonian order overriding the writ of habeas corpus granted by Judge Wylie. You saw the choked woman whose body, sewed up in a sack, swayed to and fro beneath the gallows. Even the lifeless body of the woman was withheld, by that insatiable malice which pursues the dead, from the hands of grief-stricken friends, and was consigned to earth in the jail-yard at Washington. Mr. Johnson tells us all this, and more. He referred to the terror at Washington; that his own life was threatened; that the Attorney General (on the testimony of the convicted perjurer Sanford Connover) gave it as his opinion that the woman should be tried by military commission-just such a commission as has been spilling the blood of French men, women and children on the plains of Sartory; that Mrs. Surratt was fairly tried, convicted and executed. Mr. Johnson adroitly endeavors to impress the public with the idea has been starved out and replaced by a seventy-five pounds to the square inch. that Mrs. Surratt was guilty. Yes, he also endeavored to impress the people with the idea that Mr. Jefferson Davis has been repaired by a lady whose name when he tightened his arms to the last was likewise guilty of the Lincoln murder when in April, 1865, he issued a

The present reigning family descended from Count Rudolph of Hapsburg, who was elected Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire in 1272. William I, Emperor of Germany, was born March 22, 1797. He was appointed Regent of the Kingdom of Pruscia during the mental illness of his brother in 1861. In 1861 he ascended the throne. During the late Franco-Prussian war he was crowned fifty-four years old. He is the son of Nicholas I and Princess Charlotte of Russia. He succeeded his father in 1851. The Government of Russia is an absolute will alone is law. These three great potentates hold the balance of power in Europe in their hands. They are distrustful of each other, and at the same time entertain fear of each other, all of which has rather a wholesome effect upon the policies which they pursue.

HENRY REED, the Washington journalist recently assaulted by Judge Lewis Dent, pours hot shot into the Grant-Dent family in lively style. He says: You would hardly be made to believe, even if it were describable, the extent to which the Grant-Dent connection pervades everything, from the departments of the government, through the courts of justice, down to the minutest transaction to which it is possible for any one of them to continue to attach an interest. To say that General Grant is no party to this is preposterous. He is the head of the family—nominally and actually, in fact and in spirit. He is of the same order, species, variety; no better nor different. He is, accidentally, the lion, to which they are the jackals; the shark, to which they are the pilot-fish; the 'fence,' to which they are the pilot-fish; the 'fence,' to which they are the pick-pockets and burglars. He is the Fagin—they the Toby Crackits and Artful Dodgers."

GERMANY is making gigantic efforts to place herself on an equal naval footing with England, France and Russia. When the ships actually begun are completed, Germany will have a war fleet of sixty-two vessels, with an armament of five thousand guns. Bismarck, like all great conquerors, is ambitions to shine in the field in which he has not won his victories. Naval powers, however, like poets, are born, not made; or at least they are built up slowly, and many years must elapse before the fleets of France, Germany or Russia will be as efficient as that of Great Britain.

An exchange, in noticing the imperial caucus, gives the pedigree of the Emperors of Germany, Austria and Rassia is regarded with much interest in Europe. That there is a political significance in it there can be little doubt; but what that significance is, nobody is prepared to say. Each one of the Emperors has in view his pet scheme for strengthening his empire, and though he may not be able to carry it out entirely during the present interview, yet he undoubtedly hopes to advance it somewhat.
