SCALP DANCE.

How the Utes Celebrate their Vic- tories.

Denver Times, July 15.

About three o'clock yesterday afternoon our reporter went over to the camp, situated about four miles from Denver, and about three miles from the Larimer street bridge over the Platte. Already preparations had commenced for the grand scalp glorification, one of the redskins having manufactured a drum by stretching a deer-skin over the rim of a cheese-box. Three other drums were soon manufactured; a frying pan, a tin can, and a brass kettle being used for the bodies of the drums. Having covered his face with paint, the fellow with the tin drum laid down in his tent and commenced practicing the weird music of the scalp dance. He was soon joined by others, when the scalps taken from the Sioux were brought to the front of the tent, and poles, to which they were attached, stuck in the ground, while the scalps swayed to and fro in the breeze.
One by one the braves gathered around, decorated with their best trappings, covered with beads, and painted with red, yellow, green, brown and white.
About an hour before sundown, and before many chiefs had returned from Denver, the scalp poles were pulled up, and the dusky warriors selected a portion of the prairie remote from any wigwam, where they again fixed the poles about four feet from each other. Then they staked down in a line on the ground with their backs to the setting sun and their faces to the blood-stained swaying scalps, and commenced a strange chant, beating time upon the drums with sticks, which had for heads leaves secured to one end with plant twigs. About a half hour they thus sat chanting, equally extravagantly stirred and painted.

About thirty had gathered around, when the squaw of the brave who had killed one of the Sioux stepped in front, took one of the scalp-poles and commenced to march in a circle in front of the musicians, adding at the same time the shrillness of her voice to make the din unearthly. One by one the squaws fell in behind the scalp bearer, until about a dozen were making the magic circle.

Then up comes another squaw and takes another pole, and starts a procession, moving in a reversed direction to that taken by the first. Upon the arrival of Washington, one of the chiefs, who seemed to know just how the thing should be done, three of the oldest squaws in the tribe formed a third procession, moving inside the others, and in the same direction as the outside circle. And now drops into line with the outside circle the third scalp bearer and followers. Korakantik, seemingly the oldest chief in the collection, advances in front of the braves—who arose to their feet upon the advent of the women—and proceeds to dance. A crier also advances to the front and commences to harangue the braves.

On the open prairie, just as the sun is sinking behind the mountains, half a hundred Indian warriors, with faces rendered savagely fierce with paint, and garments of flaming colors, are standing in a line, which sways to and fro in time to beating of drums and the change of tone of the fiendish music of the scalp chant. In front of these the veteran gray-haired warrior of the tribe dances with strange antics, and the stalwart form of a huge brave is bent in all conceivable shapes, as he in loud and excited words recounts the circumstances of the capture and exhorts the men. In front of all, the magic circles of squaws move round, the scalps streaming above their heads, being beaten in the dust with revengeful fury, or held in their teeth, when the savage grin is most intense and chant most uproarious. Their march is of a limping nature, each procession giving way with the same leg, in strange unison to the swaying of the braves.
These things, together with the weird music only known among savages, when at regular intervals the shrill voice of the women rises above those of the men, and occasionally the startling war-whoops rings loud over all, render the scene one never to be forgotten.

About fifteen hundred persons must have visited the camp and witnessed the scalp dance, which continued for many hours, and to which Washington, in the name of the tribe, welcomed all white folks, "both braves and squaws," as he expressed it.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Many who are suffering from the effects of the warm weather and are debilitated, are advised by physicians to take moderate amounts of whisky two or three times a day. In a little while those who adopt this advice frequently increase the number of "drinks," and in time become confirmed inebriates. A beverage which will not create thirst for inteating liquors, and which is intended especially for the benefit of debilitated persons, whether at home or abroad, is Dr. Sechenek's Sea Weed Tonic. Containing the juices of many medicinal herbs, this preparation does not create an appetite for the intoxicating cup. The nourishing and life-supporting properties of many valuable natural products contained in it and well known to medical men have a most strengthening influence.
A single bottle of the Tonic will demonstrate its valuable qualities. For debility arising from sickness, over exertion or from any cause whatever, a wine-glassful of Sea Weed Tonic taken after meals will strengthen the stomach and create an appetite for wholesome food.

To all who are about leaving their homes, we desire to say that the excellent effects of Dr.
Sechenek's seasonable remedies, Sea Weed Tonic, and Mandrake Pills, are particularly evident when taken by those who are intri-cally affected by a change of water and diet.
No person should leave home without taking a supply of these safeguards along. For sale by all druggists. cod-152-155
