Judge Tipton, of the Bioomington circuit, in a recent railroad case, rendered a decision which will probably open the way to very important results in regard to aid the courts do not.—

Chicago Times. furnished by towns, cities, and counties in building railroads. Among other points, as we understand his decision, he says:

The town and county bonds issued in aid of a railroad are a valid lieu on it which cannot be destroyed or set aside by other lieus of a fictitious character; and that when the railroad company fraudulently deprive towns and counties of their rights and interests by outside sale, lease or con-tract, the injured towns and counties may recover at common law.

It has heretofore been generally thought that when a county or town makes such a subscription, the money is gone foreverthe only consideration that can be received back being the indirect benefits conferred by the road on local property. But Judge Tipton, in the case decided above, States that the interests of bons fide stockholders, whether individuals or counties and towns, are not to be submerged under any pretense whatever. In this view of the question there is no good reason why nearly all the town and county subscriptions to railroads in this State should not ultimately be recovered from the roads. A directory has no right to dissipate the interests of towns and counties by unnecessary debts, or profligate contracts, or watered stock, which impair the original stock. The courts have authority under the common law to hold directors to a rigorous account, to displace them if they abuse their trust. and to exact of them an administration of and now used throughout North the road based on its actual cost, not its and South America, with more the road based on its actual cost not its

HOT AIR FURNACES. The Machines that are Used in Some Cities to Murder School Children.

(Frem the New York Times.) With the facilities at our command it would not be easy to form anything like an accurate estimate of the number of deaths that have resulted in the cities and towns of this country, during the past ten years, from the system of heating employed in the majority of houses. Mr. Carl Pfeiffer, in his very interesting paper on "Sanitary Relations and Health Principles of Archi-tecture," Jelivered last week before the tecture. Jelivored last week before the American Health association, took particu-lar pains to point our the effect of furnace heat upon the human constitution. The heat upon the human constitution. The hot-air formace, in its present form, was, according to Mr. Pfeifler—"first employed at the end of the last century by a Mr. Strutt, of Beper, near Derby, for warming his cotton mills, and was soon after introduced into general use. Its distinctive feature is that its application of fire heat to metalle surfaces is a direct one, without the intervention of either water or steam. to metalic surfaces is a direct one, without the intervention of either water or steam and it is this feature, which, in my yies, makes it utterly objectionable, except, perhaps, in cases where the object is merely to produce a drying and warming effect of considerable intensity for specific manufacturing or laundry purposes. In all other cases it is to be utterly condemned. Indeed, there seems to be a general concession that the heat produced by hot-air furnaces is of the most injurious character in its influence upon health. Dizziness, coldnessed languar in the extremities, feebleness of pulse, fainting fits—such are some of the symptoma that have everywhere been symptoms that have everywhere the symptoms that have everywhere need to accompany this mode of heating, undermining health in its most susceptible department—the nervous organization. Air heated thus artificially, without contact of water, acquires an artifity which causes it rapidly to absorb moisture from the skin and lungs of persons exposed to its influences, and the evaporation, by its refrigerating effect, contracts the bloodvessels at the surface, while other parts not being exposed to this influence, become in consequence, surcharged with the fluids. in consequence, surcharged with the fluids which are repelled from the extremities. The very best authorities agree as to the appropriate the state of the state sjurious influence of hot-air when not modis jurious influence of hot air when hot mod-ified by vapor of water. The doctors have hitherto only very feebly protested against the hot air furnace. Indeed, we venture to say that sources of them have given the matter so little attention that this fruitful agent of disease would be found doing its deadly work in their own houses.

deadly work in their own houses.

Many a young girl has been hastened to the grave through a fonders for sewing or reading "over the register." In homes where stores are excludeely susplayed for heating purposes, the danger from dry air by no means inconsiderable. The heat to means inconsiderable. The heat primaries of the properties of t radiated in this way is capable of modification. Very few modern stoves are without facilities for warming water, yet it would be safe to say that in fifty cases out of every hundred they are neglected. By carefully keeping the water-warmers filled, the atmosphere may be maintained sufficiently moist for healthy respiration. A failure to do so will cause the nervous disorders referred to by Mr. Pfeiffer, just as surely, if not speedily, as the blighting breath of the furnace. There is another point in connection with the subject of hot-air turnaces which ought not to be lost sight of. It is that in regard to the decomposi-tion of animal and vegetable matter by the action of dry heat. During the warm weather the flues which connect the furnace with the rooms up stairs draw into them by degrees a vast quantity of the particles that emanate from human bodies. When the first cold "snap" comes, the furnace is set going at full blast. Decomposition be rins almost immediately, and the odor pro-inced has often caused surprise in the fam-ly. There are few house keepers who have a timocently done the furnace-cleaner injustice oftener than once. Mr. Hood, who is given as an authority on this question, says. Not only will the hut air furnee, which is particularly hable to these objections act powerfully in decomposing the floating par-ticles of extraneous matter contained in tieles of extraneous matter contained in the air, resolving them into sulphuretted, phosphuretted and carburetted hydrogen, with various compounds of nitrogen and carbon, but it will likewise decompose a portion of the vapor contained in the air, absorbing the oxygen and liberating the hydrogen.

Surely facts like these ought to be sufficnvince the most stubborn friends of the furnace of their error in keeping it
