· BETTER FARMING"

How many of our Farmers will have enough hay to cover their needs for the winter and spring? This is question which should be answered as quickly as possible Roughage of all kinks will be scarce this year and what little thereon will be on the markets will undoubtedly command a high price, so it is a question of importance that we all store enough to cover requirements and that we utilize everything that our stock will eat. In many cases it looks as if it would be a wise thing to cut and cure peavines, especially on such lands as are intended for fail vegetable crops. Even some of our corn stalks will be of some value in filling the shortage

The real wise course lies in the direction of winter crops of oats. crimson clover. Abruzzi rye & eic The time for planting these crops is pratically now here. Rye and crimson clover planted in September will furnish good grazing in December and will all also be of cantonments. For the cantonment great value as fertilizing crops to for this district 240 cooks are wan be turned under in the Spring. | ted Oats will furnish good grazing & also furnish a crop of grain next May when our corn supply is running low. In addition to the feeding value of these crops we must also consider their value as winter cover crops for our unoccupied lands and the amount of humus that they will add to our hun three states, who will serve with gry soil is of itself well worth the labor and expense

MANY HOGS SOLD FOR LESS THAN VALUE

Feed Crops Should Be Utilized For Fall Pork Production-Breeding Stock Must Be Kept

Farmers have been advised to plant an abundance of feed crops; and the only successful way to market such crops is to use them for finishing of live stock. If the stock is sold before the crops are produced, it defeats the very purpose for which the crops were planted. Since the prices for hoge have gone so high, buyers have invaded many parts of Louisiana and are purchasing all the hogs they can get at prices approximating half the value of butcher hogs on the market. The prices paid have ranged from 6 cents to 8 or 9 cents a pound and many of these hogs have been subsequently sold at from 14 to 16 cents. A 60-pound pig at 8 cents brings less than $5.00. The same pig if kept on pasturege with just enough grain to keep it in a thrifty and growing condition should easily finish-off et around 200 pounds next winter cr spring. At the present prices it would bring $25 to $35-the difference amounting to an average of say $25 represents the farmer's feed crops prepared for the market by feeding it to the growing pig. Now if he sells the before he puts the feed into him and then cannot sell the cron it will be a loss in every way.

It is therefore thought desirable to invite the attention of the farmers to this question and to advise them not to sell any light, young bogo that should be kept and finished in the fall or winter, and also to avoid selling any broad sows that may be needed for increasing the number of hogs on the farm. It is not economical to sell hogs until they have reached a satisfactory weight for the slaughterhouse, or say 150 pounds es a minimum. If it becomes necessary to self off part of the hog stock, the owner should keep posted on the markets and should probably insist on getting for young hogs not less than twothirds of the top prices for finished hogs, or, in other words, when the top of the market is 15 cents a pound, hogs on the farm should not bring less than 10 cents if they are at all promising for the market in six to ten months hence.

It should certainly be the aim of every farmer to keep enough hogs to supply his own meat for next year and, if possible, have a surplus for sale to his neighbors.—G. E. Nesom Live Stock Extension Service, Louisiana State University.

THE BERRY CROP SHOULD BE SAVED

Wild Fruits of Many Kinds Annually Go To Waste in Louisiana.

By ufflizing to a greater extent the wild fruits, such as dewberries, black berries, huckleberries, nuts and muscadines, that are produced in abundance in Louisians and that largely go to waste, an immense saving in food products could be effected. The blackberry crop is of particular importance. They grow in profusion in abandoned fields and along the road sides and are usually free for the gathering. Berries may be easily pre served by following the simple directions here given:

Preserving Berrice. Practically the same methods are to be followed in preserving and making jams of all berries. Berries should be gathered in shallow trays or baskets and not in deep vessels, which sllow them to be bruised and crushed. They should be uniform, ripe, and sound. Select only large, firm berries for preserving; the smaller and broken ones may be used for making jam. All berries should be earefully sorted and lightly washed by placing in a colander and pouring water over them rather than putting them into a pan

To retain the best possible of and flavor, syrup for preserved berries should be made of a berry juice obtained by crushing, heating and straining the softer, broken berries. Add 1 pint of sugar to each pint of berry fuice and allow to boil 10 minutes. Weigh the choice perfect ber ries after removing the caps or stems and allow 1 pound of sugar extra for each pound of whole berries. Add the extra sugar to the syrup, bring to a boil and skim. Remove from the fire and cool syrup before dropping the berries into it to prevent shriveling and toughening the fruit. Place over the fire and bring slowly to a boil and simmer until the berries are heated through, being careful not to overcook; the berries should remain whole. Lift the berries from the syrup and place carefully into shallow pans. Pour syrup over them and Mr. and Mrs. James Blanchard allow to stand over night. Pack cold, filling the jar with berries before pouring syrup over them. Cap, process, and seal. The preserves may be pack ed hot, after removing from the are,
