

GRENADA SENTINEL.

"Bertram," she murmured. Quick as thought the organist raised his head. There, with the light of a lamp suspended to the arch above falling full upon her stood the Princess who had graced the royal pew that day. The court dress of velvet, with its ermine trimmings, the tiara, the necklace, the bracelets, had been exchanged for a grey serge robe and a long thick veil, which was now pushed back from the fair girlish face.

"Why are you here, Bertram?" asked the Princess. "I came to bid you farewell; and as I dare not venture into the palace, I gained access to the cathedral by bribing the bellringer, and having taken the vacant seat of the dead organist, let my music breathe out the adieu I could not trust my lips to utter."

A low moan was the only answer, and he continued:

"You are to be married on the morrow?"

"Yes," sobbed the girl. "Oh, Bertram, what a trial it will be to stand by your altar, and take upon me the vows which will doom me to living death!"

"Think of me," rejoined the organist. "Your royal father has requested me to play at the wedding, and I have promised to be here. If I were your equal I could be the bridegroom instead of the organist; but a poor musician must give up."

"It is like rending soul and body asunder, to part with you," said the girl. "To-night I may tell you this—tell me how fondly I love you, but in a few hours it will be a sin! Go, and God bless you."

She waived him from her, as if she would banish him while she had the power to do so, and he—how was it with him? He rose to leave her, then he came back held her to his heart in a long embrace, and with a half smothered farewell left her.

The next morning dawned in cloudless splendor, and at an early hour the cathedral was thrown open, and the sexton began to prepare for the wedding. Flame-colored flowers nodded by the wayside—flame-colored leaves came rushing down from the trees and lay in heaps upon the ground; and the ripe wheat waved like a golden sea, and berries dropped in red and purple clusters over the rocks along the Rhine.

At length the palace gates were opened and the royal party appeared, escorting the Princess Elizabeth to the cathedral, where her marriage was to be solemnized.

It was a brave pageant; far brighter than the untwined foliage and blossoms, were the tufts of plumes which floated from stately heads and festal robes that streamed down over the housings of the superb steeds. But the Princess, mounted on a snow-palfrey, and clad in snow-white velvet, looked pale and sad; and when, on nearing the church, she heard a gush of organ music which, though jubilant in sound, struck on her ear like a funeral knell, she trembled and would have fallen to the earth, had not a page supported her. A few minutes afterwards she entered the cathedral. There, with his retinue, stood the Royal bridegroom, whom she had never before seen. But her glance roved from him to the organist, there she had expected to see the mysterious organist. He was gone, and she was obliged to return the graceful bow of the King, to whom she had been betrothed from motives of policy. Mechanically she knelt at his side on the altar stone; mechanically listened to the service and made the response.

Then husband drew her to him in a convulsive embrace, and whispered: "Elizabeth, my queen, my wife, look up!" Trembling in every limb, she obeyed. Why do those dark eyes thrill her so? Why did that smile bring a glow on her cheeks? Ah! though the King wore the royal purple, and many a jeweled order glittered on his breast, he seemed the same humble person who had been employed to teach organ music, and had taught her the lore of love.

"Elizabeth," murmured the monarch. "Bertram Hoffman, the mysterious organist, and King Oscar, are one. Forgive my stratagem."

I wished to marry you, but I would not drag to the altar an unwilling bride. Your father was in the secret."

While tears of joy rained from her eyes, the new made queen returned her husband's fond kisses, and for once two hearts were made happy by a royal marriage.

The Armless Artist.

Caesar Ducrest was born in Lille, France, January 10, 1806. Born as he was without arms, what was there for him to do, even in this busy world? Each foot had four toes, but he early learned to use these with advantage. When very young he could with ease throw a ball, cut with a knife, and draw lines on the floor with chalk, and could even cut figures on paper with his mother's scissors. He early became a good penman. From this he passed to drawing, and naturally enough to painting, the wide space between his great toe and the next enabling him to grasp his papers firmly. At the age of thirteen his progress astonished Watteau, professor at the School of Design in Lille, who received him as a pupil. Only three years later, he took the first prize for the drawing of the human figure.

from nature. After this he pursued his studies in Paris. He was of a lively temperament, and when in conversation he became animated, he was in the habit of gesticulating with his legs. Some one has described a visit to his painting room, which is interesting.

"Across the whole extent of the canvas ran, with incredible agility, like a fly upon the wall, the stunted trunk of a man, surmounted by a noble head, with expansive brow and eye of fire; and wherever the apparition passed along the canvas, he left the traces of color behind him. On approaching a few paces nearer we were aware of a lofty but slender scaffolding in front of the canvas, up and down and across the steps and stages of which climbed, and crouched, and twisted—it is impossible to describe how—the shapeless being we had come to see. We saw then that he was deprived of arms; that he had no thighs; that his short legs were closely united to his body; and that each of his feet wanted a toe. By one of his feet he held a palette—by the other a pencil. And in all this harness he moved, and rolled, and withered and painted in a manner more than marvelous; a voice musical, grave, and sonorous, saluting us by name, and invited us to be seated. Then the apparition glided down the whole length of the scaffold to the ground, advanced or rather rolled toward us, and with a bound established himself on the sofa at our side. We watched him with interest, and had a long conversation with him. He told us he had been born without arms, and was now making money by his art. He used his feet with almost as much ease as people do with hands, holding his palette in his left one, and his brush in the right, as though all his toes were fingers, changing them with the most perfect facility, and even thrusting his foot into his pocket, as another man would his hand. He wrote his name with great rapidity, and well, and told us he shaved himself."
