NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Cotton declined 9 points, then railled, and closed steady at a net decline of 4 to 5 points, with sales of 113,300 bales.

To-day's features: The smallness of the speculation was really the greatest drawback; as has been for some time past, Liverpool was slightly lower, and New Emmand flooded the market with dolorous reacris in regard to the condition of the dry goods trade, but all this had very little effect after all.

There was a moderate decline, and part of this was recovered. Liverpool declined but slightly and reported large sales. The Manchester advices were rather cheerful, and the stock markets there and in Europe were higher. An average spring rade in dry goods was reported in most sections of the country, and as for New England it protests too much. Fall River, we are assured, had a blank in business last week, and if that were not bud enough the down-east Yankees add in the same breath. "We expect another biank this week."

Aff. Alex. Harthill reports the Louisville (Ky.) tobacco market for the week ending Saturday, January II, 1898, as follows:
Large sales of new burley at auction, a fairly active market generally for all grades offered, no change in new darks, either in quality or price, with weather cloudy and cook, throughout the entire week, were the leading features.

The offerings consisted of 2,390 hogsheads of new barley, 323 hogsheads of old burley, 170 hogsheads of new dark, and 125 hogsheads of old darks.

Capital Punishment.

Every now and then a petition asking for the abolishment of capital punishment is brought before some body of law-makers. Such a petition from the Heligious Society of Friends was presented to the Virginia Senate Monday. While we do not believe that the death penalty is a success as a punishment, still it is the only safe way of dealing with criminals who pass beyond the bounds of humanity and commit crimes that are too horrible to mention. It is all very well to talk of mercy and the enlightenment of the ninefeenth century, but it does not alter the case at all, nor does it make law-abiding citizens of those who seem to be born with the germs of murder and rapine in their natures.

Life imprisonment would, no doubt, he a more terrible form of punishment in some cases than the quick, sharp stroke of death, but there are too many contingencies to guard against. There is such a thing as a prisoner escaping from prison, and governors sometimes pardon criminals upon no other recommendation than the maudlin tears and sympathy of a few weak-minded persons who make heroes of such characters as Frank and Jesses James.

service. Postmaster Warfield says he has never inquired and does not care to know the politics of any of the employes of the office. They are simply required to give an honest day's labor, for which they receive an honest day's pay. The best paying positions are within the reach of the most efficient men, and merit alone determines the question of a man's advancement. This is the principle upon which civil-service reform rests, and its application assures to the government the services of the best men in every deparment of public work.—Baltimore Sun.

who make heroes of such characters as Frank and Jesse James.

We cannot imagine where the Religious Society of Friends finds authority for the statement that capital punishment is contrav to divine law. In fact, the whole teaching of the Old Testament is "An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth," and when the Saviour was on earth He said in effect, "I am come not to destroy the law, but to fuifill it."

Society must protect itself against such men as Holmes, Durant, and Hayward, and the only way to do this is to hunt them out and place them beyond the remotest possibility of doing more harm.—Newport News Press.

The Nerit System in the Post-Office.

The merit system is in practical operation in the Baltimore post-office. All the clerks are now graded and paid according to their efficiency, and political considerations have no weight in defermining the compensation of employes, as was the case under the old spoils system. When a clerk's remuneration depends upon the value of his work it is but natural that he should seek to enhance the value of his services in order to secure greater compensation. The result is that the public offices allow. But at all events, bond the residency of those in the public respectives gain substantially by the increased efficiency of those in the public life service gain substantially by the increased efficiency of those in the public life service is improved and the people themselves gain substantially by the increased efficiency of those in the public life service is improved and the people themselves gain substantially by the increased efficiency of those in the public life.

Existence in Alexandria City Alone.

Policy thrives in the crime-rooted soil of Alexandria city and Alexandria county as luxuriantly as though it were not a violation of the law of Virginia, punishable by a fine of $1,000 and imprisonment from two to eleven months.

Policy flourishes under the protection of men whose sworn duty it is to execute the law, and draw its principal nutrition from the people of Washington. Policy patrons are not made up exclusively of one class, but in a congregation of them, poor, wretchedly poor, people are predomnant.

Seventeen policy joints are conducted in the town of Alexandria, and these could not be run without the connivance of the police. The police of Washington think it would be impossible for even a single policy shop to run openly at Alexandria without the sanction of the police there.
