MONXEYS IN THEIR NATIVE WILDS SHOW CLEVERNESS

The nature and character of the monkey are not changed by any training that he may receive. All the little tricks that may be taught him in captivity will add little to what he is accustomed to practice in his wild state. The chief difference to him is The Philathea Society of the First Baptist church, held its last regular meeting of the year last evening at the home of Miss Emily Greene, 55 chance to watch the rascals in their native wilds and native wildness find native wilds and native wildness find them up to the same mischievous Sue | pranks they play in captivity.

Every little while our expedition passed under trees occupied by troops of monkeys, some of them of the large kind that had given the explorers much trouble on a former occasion. One large tree in which they had established their quarters stretched its branches over a stream twenty yards or more.

While the leader of the expedition was watching the antics of the monkeys, two crocodiles showed their heads just underneath and remained atationary with their ugly snouts sticking up in the air. In various countries this is a common dodge of the crocodiles to entice the monkeys within their reach, and it was expected by the witnesses of this incident that one or more of the noisy animals would fall victims to the goggle-eyed monsters below, and it was with considerable curiosity that the result was awaited.

As soon as the black-looking heads popped up the monkeys became silent. then suddenly springing up on the fire Presently one big fellow, evidently of step with a muttered, "Pil send over authority in the monkey republic, a couple of souvenirs to Fritz so that came down to reconnoiter. He re- he'll miss me when I leave," he stuck turned, and in a few minutes came his rifle over the top and fired two shots back with a long, thin stick in his hand and accompanied by about a hundred of his friends. They began to chatter and to pelt their foes, but the crocodiles took no notice. The onlookers thought they seemed to give a wink of satisfaction at seeing their silly victims coming within their reach.

Nearer and nearer they came, until some of them were barely six feet above the crocodiles, and the men watching were expecting every instant to see one of them dragged under the water. All of a sudden the monkey with the stick leaned over and drove it into the eye of the crocodile nearest him. The wounded reptile sank like lead and was quickly followed by its comrade.

These letters were turned over to At about five minutes to five he the captain with instructions to mail started to fidget with his rifle, and the captain with instructions to mail same in the event of the writer's being killed. Some of the men made out their wills in their pay books, under the caption, "Will and Last Testament."

Then the nerve-racking wait commenced. Every now and then I would glance at the dial of my wrist watch and was surprised to see how fast the minutes passed by. About five minutes to two I got nervous waiting for our guns to open up. I could not take my eyes from my watch. I crouched against the parapet and strained my muscles in a deathlike grip upon my rifle. As the hands on my watch showed two o'clock a blinding red flare lighted up the sky in our rear, then thunder, intermixed with a sharp, whist ling sound in the air over our heads. The shells from our guns were speeding on their way toward the German library.

Perth Amboy Lodge No. 784, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, at its meeting last night, conferred the degree of the order on two candidates and received eight new applications, five of whom were balloted upon at this time. William S. Dey, of South Amboy, chairman of the Board of Freeholders of Middlessex county, was one of the candidates initiated and had the antlers placed on his shoulders. Exalted Ruler W. Guy Weaver was in the chair. There was a large turnout of the members at the meeting together with a number of visitors from New Brunswick. With one accord the men sprang up on the fire step and looked over the top in the direction of the German trenches. A line of bursting shells lighted up No Man's Land. The din was terrific and the ground trembled. Then, high above our heads we could hear a sighing moan. Our big boys behind the line had opened up and 9.2's and 15-inch shells commenced dropping into the German lines. The flash of the guns behind the lines, the scream of the shells through the air, and the flare of them, bursting, was a spectacle that put Pain's greatest display into the shade. The constant pup, pup, of German machine guns and an occasional rattle of rifle firing gave me the impression of a huge audience applauding the work of the batteries. Stamp Parade
At 10:30 o'clock this morning the pupils of School 7 held a 100 per cent. thrift stamp parade about the streets near the school. There are 467 pupils in the school and every one is an owner of a thrift stamp. This includes the kindergarten class. According to the school officials, this school has the record for the city's schools in the percentage of stamps purchased.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock the Coast Guards stationed in this city will give an exhibition drill to the pupils of the school near the school.
