LOVES OF GREAT AMERICANS.

General Forrest's "Whirlwind Courtship"

One Sunday morning in 1845 a young Mississippi planter-backwoodsman was riding to church along a road that was in wretched condition from the March freshets.

At one point in his ride that Sunday morning the road widened into a quagmire and miniature lake. In the midst of this mire a carriage was stuck, hopelessly bogged down.

Two men on horseback, the ladies' escorts to church—where staring stupidity at the bogged carriage, and were making no efforts to get it out of the mire or to rescue its occupants from their helpless plight.

After which he unharnessed the horses, put his powerful shoulder to the wheel, and by main strength pushed the carriage out of the slough and back to the main road.

This pleasant duty being accomplished, Forrest helped the two women into their carriage, introduced himself and insisted on escorting them to church in place of the men he had just driven away.

That afternoon he called on Mary Montgomery. While he was waiting for her to enter the drawing room so runs the story, one of the two escorts appeared. Forrest is said to have dropped this possible rival gently out of the window and to have threatened to shoot him if ever he should set foot in the Montgomery house again.

Other wooers met with similar rebuffs at Forrest's vigorous hands. And, as soon as he had cleared the field of all rivals, he embarked on a whirlwind courtship as swift and decisive as one of his later cavalry charges.

Within a very few days he and Mary Montgomery were engaged. And on April 25 of the same year they were married. Theirs was an ideally happy wedded life.

Forrest prospered in financial affairs under his wife's wise guidance until, just before he threw over all his business prospects to risk his life in the Civil war, he was making $30,000 a year.

Forrest's wife is also said to have educated him. If this is true she made a sorry job of it. To the end of his days he wrote more incoherently than would an eight-year-old school boy.

"We busted the fort at midnight and scattered them. The men are still a cillanew (n-killing them) in the woods." * * * Them them as was coted with spoons and brestpins and sich was cilled and the rest of the lot was payrold and told to git."

Yes, Mrs. Forrest was decidedly better as a wife than as an educator.

PECULIAR INCIDENT

John Frazier woke up Thursday morning last and found that his old broad mare had found twin girl mule colts. A very peculiar incident took place. The old grand-dam, which is 27 years old, claimed one of the colts and had to be taken out of the same field to keep peace in the family.

"MISSIONARY LIGHT HOUSE" IN VIRGINIA

Ingenious Device for Stimulating Interest in Monthly Offerings for Missions.—Are We Reaching Our Share?

A Missionary Lighthouse is the ingenious device employed by the mission committee of a church in Lynchburg, Virginia, for the purpose of stimulating an interest in monthly offerings. Mr. Ambrose Page, chairman of the committee, gives this description of the missionary lighthouse: The lighthouse is eight feet tall, built to a scale on one foot to an inch, therefore representing a real lighthouse ninety-six feet tall. It is six-sided, built of beaver board on a wooden frame, and in the top it has three forty-watt electric bulbs. The whole thing cost two and a half dollars, including boards, bulbs, paint, paper, nails, and tacks. It was built at home by Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Page, the writer's mother and father, both of whom have passed threescore years and ten. Space has been figured on the lighthouse for three hundred and fifty stones, each stone representing one dollar. The first two missionary collections for 1915, January and February, blocked out fifty-nine large foundation stones in the lighthouse. We have selected for our missionary hymn for the year "Let the Gospel Light Shine Out," the first verse of which begins, "Standing like a lighthouse."

The understanding is that as long as we measure up to the goal set of $29.17 each missionary Sunday the light will shine; but if we fall below that amount the light will go out, the work on the lighthouse will stop, and the cause will suffer because the gospel light will not shine out. The older members of the school and, of course, the children, are delighted with the plan, and I feel very sure that the light will shine and continue to shine. We have a painted clock on paper near the lighthouse, which shows the exact amount contributed to date. Mr. Page concludes his note with a striking bit of testimony, given here for the encouragement of other committees: "Everybody helps, and it's almost like play to carry the work along."

(Mrs. Kumashito, daughter of the second Christian baptized in modern Japan.)

Are We Reaching Our Share?

We have in North America twenty-four million Protestant church members and about fourteen or fifteen million Roman Catholic church members. Added together, these make almost one-third of the population of these countries. In other words, if we divide our field to be reached in North America by the number of us that ought to be active as Christian workers, each one of us has to reach two persons in order to make North America wholly Christian. Against that, every missionary has seventy thousand people to reach, or a field exactly thirty-five thousand times the average size of the field of each one of us here at home. Yet some of you, in your thought about your tremendous importance, are wondering whether this country or Canada can get along if you happen to decide to go away!—J. Campbell White.

FACTS THAT COUNT.

Natives on the Zambesi in South Africa have undertaken to pay the salaries of the French Mission school masters this year, rather than have the Mission schools close.

In 1859 you could buy a man in the Fiji Islands for seven dollars, butcher him and eat him. Today the Bible is in nearly every house, and on Sunday, nine-tenths of the people may be found assembled in the churches for worship. What about the power and profit of Foreign Missions?

A student in Pekin has been so impressed by the value of the New Testament that he has purchased over 5,000 copies to send to his friends.

WATERED SECURITIES

By Peter Radford.

Much has been said and more written about the evils of watered stock in big business concerns and the farmers of this nation believe that every dollar written into the life of any business organization, should be able to say "I know that my Redeemer liveth," but farming is the biggest business on earth, and there is more water in its financial transaction than that of any other industry. There is as much water in a farmer's note drawing eight or ten per cent interest when other lines of industry secure money for four or five per cent per annum, as there is in a business paying a reasonable compensation upon the face value of securities representing an investment of only fifty cents on the dollar. The only difference is, the water is in the interest rate in one instance and in the securities in the other.

The promoter oftentimes takes chances and his success is contingent upon the development of the property involved but the usurer, as a rule, takes no chances and his success cripples the property involved. There may be industries that cry louder but none that suffer more severely from financial immorality in both law and custom than that of agriculture.

The farmers of America today are paying $200,000,000 per annum in usury on real estate and chattel loans, and this interest capitalized at five per cent, represents $4,000,000,000 of fictitious values which the farmer is paying interest on. This sum of money is almost equal to the annual value of crops produced in the United States.

The earning power of the farmer's note based upon his interest rate very nearly divides like the earth's surface—three-fourths water and one-fourth land. The largest body of water that floats upon the financial hemisphere now rests upon the farms and its waves are dashing and its billows are rolling against seven million homes threatening ruin and disaster to the prosperity of the nation. Will our public servants who understand how to drain the liquid of industrial properties turn the faucet and let the water off the farms?

It is an admitted economic fact that there can be no permanent prosperity without a permanent agriculture.

Agriculture is recognized as the greatest of all industries and a prosperous, progressive and enlightened agricultural population is the surest safeguard of civilization.

World's Greatest Preacher To Speak at Chautauqua

DR. FRANK W. GUNSAULUS.

DR. FRANK W. GUNSAULUS, referred to far and wide as the world's greatest preacher, is also president of Armour Institute of Technology and pastor of Central Church, Chicago. In oratory no one excels him in either American or European pulpits. Few Chautauquas in America can give to Dr. Gunsaulus an audience as large as the one which he addresses every Sabbath morning in his home city in the great Auditorium theater. No small portion of this audience is made up of people stopping temporarily in Chicago. It is quite generally conceded among people of education and those interested in the work of the present day church that the traveler who visits Chicago has not really completed a tour of that city until he has seen the vast Sunday morning audience in the Auditorium theater and heard the orator who occupies that platform.

NOTES FROM MT. OLIVET TRIBUNE-DEMOCRAT

Uncle George McCord tells us that a furious hailstorm visited the Bald Hill vicinity in Nicholas county, recently, doing considerable damage. He says the hailstones were the size of hen eggs. Grover Overbey killed a snake on the farm of Dr. R. Wells last week that was a miniature monster in size. It measured 6 feet 1 inch in length and 7 inches in circumference. Cows in the vicinity had shown a shortage of milk supply and it is thought this snake had been milking them. It was of brown color, and spotted.

One of the most remarkable and rare freaks of nature seen here in a long while was brought to our office Monday morning by W. T. Burns, of Thomas neighborhood. It is a young turkey which has two heads, two beaks and four eyes. With these peculiar exceptions it is like any other fowl—has one body, two wings and two legs. No one who has viewed this freak has ever seen its like before.
