INDEFINITE IS CHARACTERISTIC OF GARY'S LAST SPEECH PROGRAMME WILL AFFECT CALHOUN

Not Much Stress Placed on Crops as Stimulant for General Business

SEES BETTER TIMES COMING THIS FALL

Many Who Have Read Speech Would Like to Know Cause for Recent Increases in Orders

BY HOLLAND

New York, July 6.—(Special.)—Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation, is known to be in such close touch with industrial and business conditions that whatever he may think worth while to say for publication is always carefully read, and sometimes much discussed.

That was true of the published report of the remarks which he made to the presidents of the Steel corporation subsidiaries a day or two before he sailed for Europe. The comment first and generally made after reading this address was that Judge Gary was more indefinite and relied more upon general statements than has been his custom when speaking to his subordinates, at least when his remarks were to be made public.

It was this quality of indefiniteness and of generalized statements which is spoken of here as having been characteristic of much that has been said for publication within the past eight or 12 months by those who are in authority in the business or financial world. That was a feature of the address delivered by General Vandierlip to the delegates who represented the cotton producers of the United States and who met in convention in this city early in the spring. A later address delivered by Mr. Vanderlip did contain some detailed and specific statements descriptive of the causes which have led to business depression the world over and the action which must be maintained by business men in the United States if they are to keep and increase their business prestige and influence.

Only one specific statement respecting present business conditions was made by Judge Gary and that was more of a forecast of what business activity is likely to be in the fall than an exposition of the business situation as it is today. Judge Gary is persuaded that in the early autumn there is to be an improvement in business in the Steel corporation will have its fair share. He justified that statement by reference to the fact that in the tonnage which the corporation is now handling, but as for the future, all that he could say was that he trusted the increase would be continued throughout the year.

It has been said by some of those who have read carefully the printed report of Judge Gary's remarks that they realize nothing but the fact of recent increase and the expression of the hope that it would be continued are to be found in his remarks to the presidents of the subsidiaries of the Steel corporation.

Is It the Harvest? The inference is very strong that Judge Gary regards the promise of great harvests—a promise which has already been in part fulfilled—as the chief reason for reasonable expectation that there will be considerable improvement in business in the early autumn and throughout the rest of the year. The fact that the speaks of the early autumn as the time when a considerable improvement in business conditions is likely to be observed does seem to justify the inference that it is the crops and the movement of them, the financing of them and the effect of them on the earnings of the railroad companies and upon our exportations which justify him in believing that we shall see improvement in business in the latter part of the year.

In banking circles the general opinion seems to be that these harvests are considerably to stimulate business activity in the fall and winter. If the promise of a them is realized there is going to be a large exportation of food products. The movement of the crops will put the railroad managers to their utmost endeavors in order to speedily and adequately handle the transportation from the fields to the farms. A sort of general estimate has been made of the effect of this transportation upon the revenues of the railroads, one estimate being that it will increase these revenues by as much as 10 per cent, perhaps much more.

Anniston Is Interested in Economy Plan Mapped Out by Julian

Anniston, June 6.—(Special.)—If the economy programme mapped out by Frank N. Julian in his article given to the press Monday is adopted by the Henderson administration, it will affect the state normal school at Jacksonville in this county, together with the offices of Judge H. D. Merrill, judge of the Seventh judicial circuit and W. W. Whiteside, chancellor of this district, in all probability, as well as Judge John Pelham, a citizen of Anniston and member of the appellate court. Their friends are beginning to get busy and will help them fight for their places.

Sam Jennings, mascot for the Anniston Baseball club, and ballyhooper for the games, was fined $100 and costs when arraigned before Recorder Green Monday on a charge of violating the prohibition law. Jennings always wore a high silk hat and was an amusing figure on the streets, popular with the fans.

Charlie Herron, driver of the Daniel Tyler auto truck, has a pet frog which, he says, will answer to its name any time it is called. The frog is named "Bull," and is a favorite with attaches of the city hall. Herron says he has a fine voice, but members of the city council occasionally take issue with the fireman in executive session.

No clew has been discovered that will lead to the arrest of the would-be burglar who entered the home of J. D. Brock here last week and knocked Miss Hazel Brock senseless with a fist blow on the head when he was discovered.

The prisoners in the Calhoun county jail were edified Sunday by exhortations from W. E. Lampkin, a negro preacher, who is held on a charge of using the mails for fraudulent purposes, and Anderson Lawler, also a negro. Both men are preachers, Anderson being held without bail on a charge of killing Fred Wood, near Olathe, a few days ago. They lead the songs and take time about in pointing the prisoners the way of rectitude.

A meeting was held at Chosea Spring Monday afternoon for the purpose of considering the enlargement of the district school at that place, one of the richest farming sections of the county, and the scene of the Howell Memorial tuberculosis, where Judge D. C. Blackwell and C. D. Kline spoke last Saturday.

MAY BUILD HIGHWAY AROUND MOUNTAIN

Huntsville, July 6.—(Special.)—The people of Owen Cross-Roads and all the southeastern section of Madison county, which is cut off from Huntsville by a high mountain, have started a movement to get a road built around the mountain so as to put them in touch with the outside world. Though this is one of the richest sections of north Alabama, land is cheap and this condition is credited to the lack of roads. Surveyors declare that a road of easy grade can be built from Huntsville over there and that is what the people want. The matter will be pressed for action before the county commissioners. The movement was given a momentum Saturday at a great barbecue, which was attended by 1200 people. Zac I. Drake and Clarendon Davis made addresses.
