

A CORNER IN ANCESTORS

By FRANCES COWLES.

THE KING FAMILY

(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure News-paper Syndicate.)
One theory regarding the origin of the name is that someone who took the character of a king in one of the old mystery plays eventually adopted it as his own. It is not likely that it was derived from a civil dignity. Prince, duke, marquis and the like are sometimes quite as well known as king, and are supposed to have had a similar origin. Whatever its origin, it is one of the oldest of surnames.

Variations of the name are Kings, Kingsley, Kingsland, Kingsbury, Kingsmill, Kingson, Kingsford, Kingscott, Kingslake, Kingsdown, Kingshome, and Kingsale. Many Huguenot families who settled in England changed their name to King into Kings.

From 1560, or earlier, members of the King family began to come to America. In 1633 William King, with his wife, Dorothy, an English Puritan, and their five children, settled in Salem, Mass. They came from Dorsetshire. Immigrants from Devonshire were James and William King. Devonshire was the seat of a large family of Kings. Many also lived in Oxfordshire. In Scotland and Ireland, too, the Kings flourished.

Elder Thomas King came from England to the Plymouth colony in the ship Blessing about 15 years after the landing of the Mayflower. Samuel King was another immigrant ancestor. His daughter, Mary, married John Gardner, the third lord of the manor of Gardner Island. Among Kings of an early day who were men of affairs, may be mentioned William King and William Rufus King. The former was the first governor of Maine; his statue may be seen in the capitol of Washington. During Pierce's administration William Rufus King was vice president of the United States. Samuel Ward King was governor of Rhode Island. He was a surgeon on board the Hornet and was dressing Commodore Lawrence's wounds when the commodore spoke his words, "Don't give up the ship!" Representatives of the family were in the French and Indian wars and in the war for independence.

Lieut. James King was at Lexington and Bunker Hill. Benjamin King of Massachusetts, member of the committee of safety, gave five sons to the Continental army. Rufus King, aide to General Sullivan in the revolution, was minister for two terms to the court of St. James. His wife, Mary Alsou, was one of the beauties of the republican court. Through Betty Washington Steele, wife of David King, relationship may be traced with Washington, for Betty was the great-granddaughter of Washington's only sister. It would, perhaps, require a close mathematical calculation to determine the exact relationship which the Kings and David's line bear to the father of their country.

Woman's Ignorance of Law

By MAX KORDAU

My dear girls, if there is one subject more than another you all believe you thoroughly understand, that subject is men, and when the time comes when there is just one man in the world for you, everyone of you is under the impression that you can read him backwards. Your mother held this view before you, as some of you may have noticed. The amusing part is—that to a bachelor, that generally speaking you are absolutely and entirely wrong. You do not understand men, not even a man or the man.

We men are not like books or stories in one syllable printed in large type; we are more like—so far as you fair ones are concerned—books in the lavish Chinese language, where you don't even know where to begin to read, and in which every letter or symbol possesses at least a dozen quite distinct meanings.

For some extraordinary—I was about to say reason, but lack of reason is the correct expression, a woman will believe what another woman says about men, and she will more readily than she will credit the statement of a man, who as such is bound to have wider and deeper knowledge of that portion of humanity of which she is a part than the most erudite woman could possibly have acquired as an outsider. Dame, Ind.

her that men are very dense where you are concerned. Many of you cherish the fiction that we are incapable of drawing the simplest deductions, that if we try to add two to two in any feminine affair we shall get a wrong total. Most of your little subtleties are transparent—charmingly so, very often—but all the time you put us down as blind.

And you make such quaint mistakes, too. You will often snub a man who is all, or at any rate, most of the world to you—I don't mean on purpose, but unconsciously, or without being able to help it; while you will give open encouragement, without in the least intending to, to a man who might go up in a homemade aeroplane for all you cared. And you do this all the more if the all-the-world man is present. This sort of thing sometimes gives you a headache for day or for anything up to always, according to whether you are a thank goodness-I-can-love-any-man sort of girl, or anything up to the rare and precious one-life-one-love type.

At the same time it is quite right and proper that you should study men. Here you have a vast subject, and one as interesting as it is great. Do not lose sight, however, of the fact that you are a mere student, and must always remain as such, though some of you will doubtless become advanced more than others, assuming, of course, that you prosecute your studies with sympathy, intelligence and perseverance.

Malady Due to Knitting
London, April 25.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Too much war-torn knitting and sewing is responsible for the appearance in England of a malady which may be compared with writer's cramp or tennis elbow. The physicians call it "knitter's neuritis." It affects the upper arm and shoulder rather than the fingers and seems only to afflict those who knit with difficulty, not having practiced the art in their youth. The only treatment is to give up knitting indefinitely.

"When any untrained set of muscles is tied of finger movement."
