DOMESTIC WAR CEASES

The Varrelli and Santucci Families Promise to Be Good and Court Actions Are Dropped.

The white wings of peace are now hovering over the domiciles of the Italian Varrelli and Santucci families Hereafter if they cannot live in peace and harmony the members will at least live without speaking to each other.

For the past ten days suits for assault and battery and for using obscene and indecent language have been flitt-ing between the offices of Police Judge Ryan and Justice Miller. Marie Santucci would make an information against Christine Varrelli and Christine in turn would do the same thing against Mrs. Santucci. Changes of venue were asked for and obtained, taking the various cases from one court to another, neither of the two judges being much ahead of the other in the matter. It was a curious mixup, and promised to last all summer. This afternoon Mrs. Santucci was to have been tried before Judge Miller for using bad language. This hearing or trial was to have taken place at one o'clock. At three Mrs. Varrelli was to have been tried before the same justice, and another trial was on before Judge Ryan for tomorrow.

The Varrelli family was represented by Attorney Lowell while Attorney Crum looked after the interests of the Santucci defendant. At one o'clock all of the parties assembled in Judge Miller's office where Mr. Crum made the statement that he could see no sense in permitting these cases to go on; that these people were poor and could not pay the costs and they would be impoverished all summer. He said his client was willing to dismiss all of the cases she had or might provided the other side would do the same. After Hale, E. E .- Man Without a Country, a good deal of discussion this was done, Harris, J. C.—Nights With Uncle and they were all advised to keep the peace. Mrs. Santucci remarked that Harte, Bret-Luck of Roaring Camp, she would not live in the neighborhood
