MORE GOOD ADVICE FROM HILL.

If we mistake not, James J. Hill was one of the first of the country's business men and economists to point to the inevitable increase in the cost of food products to result from the drift away from the farm. Before the matter was generally discussed, Hill in repeated interviews stated his belief that food products would grow higher in cost and the cost of living largely increase if the farm acres in this country were not made to produce more heavily and if the farms were not better cultivated. In a recent address before a body of Minnesota commercial men Mr. Hill repeated his beliefs in the following effective address:

Everybody depends upon the ground and its products. An entire crop failure for one year in the agricultural states of the northwest would mean a shortage in the food supply of the nation that would have dire results. You as retail merchants depend upon the sale, and whatever helps you helps every one else.

"I have been preaching the doctrine of rotation of crops for the past twenty-six years and during the past two or three years I have received more encouragement than ever before.

"I have tried to impress upon the people that they dare not take anything out of the soil without putting something back. For every bushel of wheat produced by the soil something must be given the soil in return. It has been only a few years since the state of Minnesota was new, but as it grows older more care must be taken to prevent exhaustion of the properties of its soil.

"I was surprised to receive a letter the other day from a man who criticized me for agitating the question of rotation of crops, and who expressed his disbelief in the virtues of my arguments. There can be no question of this necessity. Every experienced farmer who has used advanced methods of preserving the strength of the soil agree that rotation of crops must be eventually adopted in all agricultural communities. The land will not renew itself.

"The cause of the increased cost of living," continued Mr. Hill, "is the result of two things: First, the natural increase in the population of the nation, and, secondly, the fact that production has not increased. The truth of the latter statement is in the fact that our national export of agricultural products has been decreasing in the past few years.

"There are proportionately a far greater number of people living in the cities of the United States today as compared with the population of the rural districts than ever before, declared Mr. Hill. "In 1868 but 20 per cent of our people were living in the cities. Today the percentage is over 40 per cent of city dwellers, with the remainder tillers of the soil.

"In the past twenty years the American people have at least learned how to spend money with a free hand, if they have learned nothing else," said Mr. Hill, amid laughter. "As the people better their condition they better the table which they sit down three times a day," he continued. "I don't believe in hoarding money. It has its uses for doing good, but I do not believe that it is respectable for people to squander money that other people have earned for them.

"For the present year 4,000,000 automobiles have been ordered for the people of the United States. At an average of $1,000 an automobile, this would amount to $4,000,000,000. No one cent of this $4,000,000,000 is invested in anything that will produce one single bushel of grain."

In conclusion Mr. Hill predicted that from the present outlook, the agricultural states of the northwest will enjoy at least ten or fifteen years of continued prosperity, and that, in his opinion, with the use of improved methods of farming the land there is no reason why that prosperity should not continue indefinitely. "Keep the young people on the farm," he urged "it is the best place for them."

Tom Hancock of the Edgeley Mail, is on a trip south and finds other states with peculiar laws. In a recent letter to the Mail he says:

Kansas is a funny state, and has some very funny laws. Immediately upon entering the state all drinking cups and glasses were removed from the cars, and each individual desiring a drink of water, was compelled to hustle his own drinking apparatus. There is no law against drinking the water on the cars, but there is against drinking intoxicating liquors. A man didn't dare to pull the cork out of a bottle, for fear there might be a spotter on the train and any individual caught violating the law would be pulled, rushed before a justice, and soaked the usual fine. One man tested the law, and it cost him five hundred dollars to find out that it was constitutional—which was more than I cared to pay for a drink of the cup that cheers. In order not to offend any of the sensitive people of Kansas, we put up our glasses, and downed our alcoholic drinks—how we did it must remain a mystery.

We were hailing with pleasure the coming of the state of Texas, as a great many were getting tired of running through a state with such drastic laws. We just got nicely into Texas, when a gentleman came into the car and said: "I am sorry, ladies and gentleman, but you will please put up your cards, as card playing is not permitted in Texas. You can play dominoes, if you desire." That was the last straw and the air was blue for a few moments, as the order meant the breaking up of a very interesting whist game. That fool law certainly came in for some hard knocks.

"Nothing agriculturally is more fascinating than to study the corn crop of the United States. Cotton used to be king, but corn has dethroned cotton, and has rolled up figures that simply take you off your feet," writes J. George Frederick in the Travel Magazine for March. Corn grows in 120 days from its planting time. Out in the great corn belt, during 1909, the corn farmers made the ground give up to them $15,000,000 every day of those 120. In other words, every day from the time the corn farmers put the seed in the ground, fifteen millions of dollars were poured into their laps until a grand total of $1,720,000,000 was rolled up. All the gold and silver in the whole United States today isn't equal to this corn crop of last year; it was worth enough to buy entirely new clothing, jewelry and personal adornment for every man, woman and child in the country.

And this is only corn. Wheat and cotton are not far behind. Wheat never fetched such a price for the farmer since 1881 as it did last year. And no cotton planter has received such a high price for his cotton since 1871.

No wonder farmers are buying automobiles.

No wonder that the rural and semi-rural districts of the country are positively the most interesting part of our country today. Things are going on there that travelers will find as interesting as any sight-seeing on the face of the globe.

VALLEY CITY WOULD BE POTATO MARKET

Valley City, Feb. 26.—C. J. Lee, of this city, is trying to interest the business men of Barnes county as well as the farmers in making this a big potato market. The first step proposed by Mr. Lee is a potato warehouse where many thousands of bushels of potatoes could be stored and from which they could be shipped at a medium cost. Larimore, N. D., has such a warehouse and potato market, and last year shipped several hundred thousand bushels of potatoes.

Mr. Lee proposes to organize a co-operative stock company after the plan of the farmer's elevator, and engage an experienced and competent potato buyer. The company would contract with the farmers for potatoes and would maintain an open market the year around where potatoes could be sold at the current market prices. In addition, the warehouse would be equipped with storage space to be rented to foreign buyers. For instance, potato buyers from the south must have storage until they want their consignment, as they cannot keep the tubers in their climate.

Manager E. S. Delaney of the Northern Seed Co. favors the project. He suggests that in addition to the potato cellar that a large warehouse be built above to be used as a public warehouse. He considers such an institution invaluable to the city if rates are to be secured for local shippers.

THE HOUSEWIFE.

Man's Chivalry to the Fried Goddess or the Furies.

As we men frequently admit, it is our chivalrous regard for woman which leads us to desire that she shall confine her wholly admirable energies to the making of our home and the keeping of our houses. She is tender and frail, and so we urge that she shall not for a moment drop her role as the goddess of the household. There is nothing that so raises our almost sacred admiration as to see our own particular goddess with a distaff in one hand and a frying pan in the other. Let us never desert this high idea of womanhood and its lofty purpose in life.

Particularly let us not do so because if a woman does not keep the house it will not be kept. Would we men engineer and prepare 1,005 meals in one year? Would we wash dishes 1,005 times, wipe them 1,005 times, sew, darn, mend, devote our lives to a gray monotony of treadmill effort? Not on your life! Our chivalrous regard for adored woman would not permit it. And we would go crazy within six months if we tried. I know of nothing that we should cling to more closely than this chivalrous regard for our womankind. It saves the cost of many and many a hired girl.

I have penned this little tribute to man's chivalrous regard for woman because anybody can see that it deserves it. Woman, the housekeeper (and nothing else), the fried goddess of the fireside, the queen of her domestic domain, with a stewpan for a tiara and a stove hook for a scepter, let us together pledge her, while we register our chivalrous vow that we will keep her where she is unless we men need her as a stenographer or something else, in which event our chivalrous regard may stretch a few points.—Callie Monthly.

STOCKMEN TO RAISE FISH.

The Profit on Steers Is Too Small, Two Nebraska Farmers Say.

Two Nebraska farmers, disgusted with the small profits of feeding cattle, are arranging to fatten fish instead of steers, and the ponds and irrigation ditches of the western part of the state are to be stocked with food varieties.

Frank Young and Eric Johnson of Minatare, Neb., recently returned from South Omaha, where they sold cattle they have been feeding sixty cent corn. The margin of profit was so small that they failed to buy several carloads of feeders to fatten, as they intended, but instead arranged with Fish Commissioner O'Brien to send them all the fish to which they are entitled according to the size of their ponds. They will obtain other fish in the east as soon as the ponds and ditches open.

"We have lots of ditches and ponds in Scotts Bluffs," Mr. Young said, "and all they are used for is to carry water. Fish would thrive in these streams and the big irrigation ditches. Under the law the water users would not dare allow the fish to go through the gates, and if once stocked the ponds and ditches will teem with good water food.

"It is a fact that we are going into the fish business in western Nebraska, where there is always a good market for fresh fish."

Mr. Young formerly owned a big fish pond at Seward, Neb., and made a profit from it. Now he is going into the business in western Nebraska, where the water is pure and cold. The irrigation ditches make ponds between the hills and are themselves adapted to fish culture. Bass, pickerel, pike and perch are to be used, and some trout will be put into the clearer ponds and ditches, arrangements having been made to get these from Bozeman, Mont., and Leadville, Colo., where the government has hatcheries.

LIVING NO WORRY TO THEM.

Old Couple's Unique Disposal of Their Illinois Farm.

Otto Meyer and his wife, Mary, have solved the difficulties attending the high cost of living, as far as they are concerned. They have lived for years on a thirty acre farm near the village of Riverside, Cook county, Ill. By a deed filed in the recorder's office the other day Meyer, for a consideration of $6,000 in cash, conveyed to his son, Fritz H. Meyer, the farm. But in return for this the elder Meyer is to be furnished with all the necessities of life, including a house, regardless of the market value price, as long as he or his wife lives. A part of this unique deed reads as follows:

"The grantee is to provide a sufficient supply of fruit, a sufficient supply of vegetables of all kinds, to be delivered on demand; one dressed hog of 200 pounds weight, one fore quarter of fresh beef, to be delivered on Dec. 15 in each year; one-half dozen fat ducks, one-half dozen fat roosters, dressed, to be delivered Nov. 1 of each year, and three barrels of best quality wheat flour, to be delivered one barrel each time on Jan. 1, May 1 and Sept. 1 of each year; twenty bushels of good eatable potatoes, to be delivered on demand; two pounds of fresh butter each week, one dozen fresh eggs each week, one quart of fresh milk each day, except Saturday; one-half gallon of fresh milk and $40 in cash, $20 on March 1 and $20 on July 1 in each year."

NOVEL EXHIBIT AT A FAIR.

Sixty Artists Each to Give a Picture on a Single Theme.

Sixty or more of the foremost illustrators, newspaper artists and caricaturists in America will each contribute to an exhibit at the coming Actors' fund fair in New York city a painting, drawing or sketch on the same theme—an actress having her slipper tied by a man.

This theme, entitled "Beauty's Toll," was announced the other day by Albert Sterner, W. D. Stevens and H. S. Watson, the artists in charge of the exhibit, after a meeting at the Players club in New York.

All the pictures, some of which will be done by artists who never received less than $500 for a single piece, will be given to the fair, which will run from May 9 to 14, and will be sold at auction at its close.

A MARRIAGE INCOME.

Pittsburg Pastor Fixes the Figure at $2,000 a Year.

The Rev. Wright Gibson, pastor of the McKees Rocks Presbyterian church, in Pittsburg, recently notified engaged couples among his parishioners that he did not purpose to unite any couples unless the intended bridegroom could prove that his income was at least $2,000 a year.

The minister declares that with the present price of commodities this income is necessary to live. "Poverty leads to divorces," he said, "and I do not purpose to assist the divorce cause."

Australia's First War Vessel.

The first unit of the Australian navy was launched at Govan, Scotland, the other afternoon, Mrs. Asquith doing the honors. In naming the ship the British premier's wife said:

"Firstborn of the commonwealth of Australia's navy, I name you Parramatta. God bless you! May you uphold the glorious traditions of the British navy in the dominions over seas." The Parramatta is a torpedo boat destroyer of the improved river class and registers 700 tons.

USUALLY ONE DOSE. ENDS INDIGESTION

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or you feel bloated after eating and you believe it is the food which fills you; if what little you eat lies like a lump of lead on your stomach; if there is difficulty in breathing after eating, eructations of sour, undigested food and acid, heartburn, brash or a belching of gas you can make up your mind that you need something to stop food fermentation and cure indigestion.

To make every bite of food you eat aid in the nourishment and strength of your body, you must rid your stomach of poisons, excessive acid and stomach gas which sour your entire meal—interferes with digestion and causes so many sufferers of dyspepsia, sick headache, biliousness, constipation, griping, etc. Your case is no different—you are a stomach sufferer though you may call it by some other name; your real and only trouble is that which you eat does not digest, but quickly ferments and sours, producing almost any unhealthy condition.

A case of Pape's Diapiesin will cost fifty cents at any pharmacy here and will convince any stomach sufferer five minutes after taking a single dose that fermentation and sour stomach is causing the misery of indigestion.

No matter if you call your trouble catarrh of the stomach, nervousness or gastritis, or by any other name—always remember that a certain cure is waiting at any drug store the moment you decide to begin its use.

Pape's Diapiesin will regulate any out of order stomach within five minutes, and digests promptly, without any fuss or discomfort all of any kind of food you eat.

A Hart-Parr Tractor Will Do the Work of 22 Horses

And Do It Cheaper, Better and Quicker

Commence the new year by using economical power on your farm. Purchase a Hart-Parr tractor and learn how to make more money with less work. A Hart-Parr tractor does the work of twenty-two horses and will run a day for what it costs to feed ten horses. A Hart-Parr tractor uses cheap kerosene for "feed" and starts instantly and runs until stopped.

Hart-Parr tractors are substantial in construction, simple in operation and accurate in adjustment. Its parts are made of the best material obtainable, and it is made to run for years. With a Hart-Parr tractor you can plow 25 acres a day and do other farm work equally as quick.

Farm economy demands the use of a Hart-Parr tractor to plow, seed, harvest, thresh, shell corn, grind feed, shred corn, and in fact, do anything you can do with a big barn full of horses.

There are over 600 successful farmers in the Dakotas who are using Hart-Parr tractors, and if you will send for our new 1910 catalog, you will want to own a Hart-Parr tractor too. Any question you may ask in regard to applying Hart-Parr tractors to farm power will be answered by
