

Salvage Goods at Your Prices

FOR the next fifteen days you may have the remainder of my goods for the trouble of coming after them and paying a nominal price for the services of my salesmen and salesladies, wrapping paper and twine.

Now Listen.

About April 1st I want to open in the W. B. Frame drug building one of the best, biggest, newest and strictly first class stocks of goods shown in the city.

I do not intend to move a dollar's worth of my present stock to my new quarters. I will give them away first, or sell them at auction to the highest bidder.

I want you to have them at any price you may think you can use them and if the following prices do not insure your prompt attention and quick purchase I will then feel that values count for nothing.

Read prices below carefully, and remember the goods quoted are in stock—plenty of it—to supply every one that is fortunate enough to attend this sale. I will be forced to limit the quantity to each customer in some line in order that all may share the feast.
