We have examined the United States jail at this place and find the same in good sanitary condition, the prisoners well fed and provided for, there was some complaint among some of the prisoners about the character of food furnished them and in this connection we desire to say that we unexpectedly called at the jail at the noon hour and personally inspected the food furnished the prisoners and found same to be excellent.

We desire to thank the court and its officers for assistance rendered and courtesies shown us, and having completed our labors ask that we be discharged.

Respectfully submitted,

J. S. B. APOLLOS, Foreman.

Trinity Methodist Church.

Ardmoreite Special.

The Trinity Methodist church of Denver in which the Rev. Dr. Henry Buchtel was recently inaugurated as governor of Colorado, has filed with the state legislature a bill of $100 for rent. This is the institution of which Governor Buchtel was one of the founders, where he was inaugurated as chancellor of Denver university and later as governor, and from which he says he hopes to be buried. The clergyman governor took the oath of office in the church at his own request and the action of the church authorities in charging rental for its use is hotly condemned by many of the members of the Colorado legislature.

How to Avoid Pneumonia

You can avoid pneumonia and other serious results from a cold by taking Foley's Honey and Tar. It stops the cough and expels the cold from the system as it is mildly laxative. Refuse any but the genuine in the yellow package. Sold by Hoffman Drug Co., and City Drug Store.

NOTICE.

From and after this date all Bankruptcy notices will be charged at the legal rate and payment is required in advance or else some responsible individual must assume personal responsibility for the payment.

A GEM OF A LIBRARY

ITS WONDERFUL SCHEME IN COLOR TONE AND GLASSICS.

The Delightful Harmony of the Soundings Was Only Exceeded by the Ingenuity of the Twelve Volume Edition of Ennius.

A St. Louis professor who makes a specialty of the classical languages and is particularly fond of the Latin literature was treated not long since to a surprise he is not likely soon to forget.

An old friend who for many years resided in a distant state not long ago moved to this city and sent to the professor notice of his arrival. The train met downtown by appointment, and the new arrival invited the professor to call at his home "as soon as we get things fixed up." After a decent interval allowed for the fixing up the professor called, and as the gentleman of the house was momentarily engaged the man of much Latin was ushered into his friend's library, where he sat delighted with the elegant appearance of the superb carved oak bookcases and the long rows of gilt and Russia. His chair was close to one of the cases, and, glancing round, he noted with keen satisfaction the names of Greek authors who had been his lifelong library companions. He also noted that each half of each case to the middle of the door contained exactly twelve volumes and that each author's works constituted a set of the same number. Heavier, twelve volumes, Sophocles, twelve, so also with Aeschylus, Euripides, Herodotus, Thucydides and even Theophrastus, each had its appointed number.

"This is peculiar," said the professor to himself, for he knew that some of these authors wrote little and others much. "Extensive commentaries perhaps," was his reflection, and, rising, he stepped to the next case, and on the top shelf here was Ennius in twelve volumes, leading a long line of most respectable Roman historians and poets. "What's this?" The professor gave a start, for, although he knew perfectly well that Ennius was the first in time of the Latin poets, he knew also that there were only about a couple of dozen lines of him left and that these had been preserved as quotations in the works of later writers.

"Ennius in twelve volumes! I never heard of such a thing. What in the world can it be?"

He glanced involuntarily at the lock. But there was no key. And while his mind was greater, the door opened and in came his friend.

Half an hour later, after old times had been discussed and former friends recalled, the professor, who grew more and more curious to find out how any commentator could expand twenty or thirty lines of an old time poet into twelve large volumes, brought up the subject.

"By the way, I notice you have an Ennius here in twelve volumes. Now, remembering that only twenty or thirty lines of his poems are known to exist, I have a great curiosity to know what this can be. Is it a commentary, history or, if not, what is it?"

His friend smiled. "Oh, that's a fit idea of my wife. You see she has a taste for Latin and Greek stuff like that, and when we went to buy books for our library she determined to have a Greek case and a Latin case, but when we looked at the Greek and Latin books she found they were of all sizes, some too big to go in the shelves and some so little that they looked like babies alongside the others, so she would not take 'em."

"But having her heart set on filling up the Greek and Latin cases, she kept worrying about them until finally she hit on a great idea. The ladies always do, you know, if you give 'em time enough."

"She took her idea to the binder and told him the exact length of the shelves and their height. The binder grinned a little to himself as she explained, but he was not the man to lose a job, so he took a lot of thick pine boards, trimmed one side so that it lodged regularly like the backs of books, and she went to a library somewhere and got a list of names for him to put on the backs, and he came and tacked in the boards, and so she filled up her Greek and Latin cases in sets of twelve volumes each, twenty-four volumes on every board, and was perfectly satisfied. I don't know what she did with the boys. Ah, here she is now! Allow me to introduce my friend, Professor Blank. I was just telling him, my dear, of your little idea of the Greek and Latin cases."

"Oh, I hope, professor, you admire the sets!" said the lady. "Aren't they lovely?"

"Perfectly lovely, madam!" echoed the professor.

"And don't you think it's a good idea?" rejoined the lady. "You see nobody ever reads those old books anyhow, but the uniform sets look pretty, and the red contrasts well with the carpet."

"Beautifully," murmured the professor, and the subject was dropped, but as he is still wondering how much lower classical learning will sink after that twelve volume edition of Ennius—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Gave Immediate Thanks.

"The first thing Columbus did on landing in America was to kneel and express his gratitude."

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne; "I suppose he was thankful to get here under circumstances that did not bring him into contact with the customs of officers."—Washington Star.
