

FIND CALIFORNIA ROAD VERY ROUGH

S. S. School Girls Get as Far as Muskogee on Coast Jaunt

POLICE TAKE THEM IN

Now They Are Home Again and Sand Springs Isn't So Bad After All

Ruth Holton and Lila Hilt, 13-year-old Sand Springs school girls, have decided that it's a long, rough road to California, and that Sand Springs isn't so bad, after all. Ruth and Lila started out their trip ended when they were picked up by a policeman at Muskogee and returned to their homes accompanied by Ruth's father, H. H. Holton, 614 North Main street, Sand Springs. Lila lives with a brother and two sisters at 421 North Willow street in the Tulsa suburb.

While Lila's relatives conducted a search for them late Thursday night, Ruth and Lila were riding on the train between Tulsa and Muskogee. Following the first day of their journey, the girls expressed their desire to return to a rooming house and asked for accommodations. The landlady became suspicious and called a policeman. The girls were seized and taken to the police station.

Neither Had Money. They were en route to California, they explained, although they were unable to state how they expected to make the trip without money. They informed the policeman a kindly trainman allowed them to ride from Tulsa to Muskogee without charge because they had no money. They told him they had lost all they possessed.

"I thought someone told me this is a free country," Lila bitterly remarked on her way to the Muskogee police station.

"Aw, that was somebody trying to kid you," Ruth rejoined. Both girls expressed their contempt for the police department. Lila especially seemed to have no use for the department. She opined that the police "could catch girls like us," but she added that "there are other girls all around our house and the other day when the Tulsa police came out everybody ran; they've got the Sand Springs law book off—a girl told me and she knows."

Ruth apparently is determined she will run away so many times her parents will quit trying to catch her. She told the policeman she expected to keep running away until they can't find me."

Represent Roschids. They told the officer also they were supposed to represent roschids in a play presented at the Garfield school in Sand Springs.

Asked what part of California they preferred, the girls replied that "any old point will do," they expressed no desire to become actresses.

Lila gave no reason for running away except that she wanted to go to California; Ruth alleged her father whipped her Sunday and that she didn't deserve it.

When the Muskogee chief of police communicated with the head of the Sand Springs police department, Ruth's father took the next train that left for Muskogee. He returned about 1 o'clock Saturday morning with them.

Ruth Is Penitent. Ruth's attitude was one of penitence. She insisted that she has no more desire to see California, and that she'll be content to remain at home.

Her father, a kindly-faced man of middle age, was mowing the lawn in front of his modest little home, two blocks from the page mansion. He denied Ruth's allegation that he whipped her. However, he did say he had threatened to chastise her because she insisted on staying out late at night, she is a mere child and appeared perfectly contented to play with her dolls.

Lila was found at the home of her brothers and sisters, all of whom are grown to manhood and womanhood. The family is one-sixteenth Cherokee Indian. It was evident when the reporter arrived that Lila had not escaped several severe upbraidings at the hands of her elders. It was evident also these lectures had not sweetened her temper.

She answered questions with unhesitating reluctance and without a waste of words. Most of her replies were confined to "yes" or "no."

Her Parents Are Dead. Asked if she could point out the place in Tulsa to which she referred during her talk with the Muskogee chief of police, she replied "no." Pressed for a reason for her statement, she finally declared with an air of finality that she "didn't know where they were, but one of her girl friends told her she knew where there is one."

The family consists of George, Ella, Cornelia and Lila. George and Ella work and support the family. From an adjoining room Ella remarked she couldn't understand why Lila ran away.

"We haven't much money, and we have to work for what we get, but we try to keep Lila in clothes," she said, and it was evident her words were directed to Lila as well as to the reporter. "I even go without things myself that she may have plenty to wear."

The parents are both dead.

EXPECT BIG VOTE ON SCHOOL BOARD, FACTIONS BITTER

This sum will take care only of the most urgent building needs.

These bonds are necessary, Dr. N. W. Maginnis, president of the school board, pointed out Saturday, to complete the high school addition in order that it may be ready for the opening of school next fall. They are necessary to give Celia Clinton a new study hall, and to provide classrooms for the children of Central grade school and the special school.

Central High Jammed. Central high has now 42 rooms with two teachers in each room. This is a condition that should not obtain in Tulsa's high school, the board believes, and it is to relieve it that the addition is being built and equipped. Of the $275,000 asked for, $50,000 is to be spent for equipment for the new addition, $50,000 to finish the heating contract, mechanical equipment and extras on the high school addition and $27,500 to finish the administration building on the old central grounds, general contracting, heating and ventilation. The equipment fund asked for the administration building is $5,000. The sum needed for building units and purchasing sites is $50,000, and $25,000 needed for building six to eight rooms, and study hall at Celia Clinton. Supervision, equipment for units and extras totals $7,500.

SAVING NOTES

It's Not What You Earn That Counts

Nobody can expect to continue at the highest earning ability throughout a lifetime. There is sure to come a time when earning power diminishes from natural causes, and even before that time, sickness, accident or a turn of fortune may destroy much of one's earning power.

The average young man believes always that there is plenty of time to start saving. He little realizes the earning power of money multiplies by years. He does not appreciate the power of habits formed early in life and their resistance to change in later years. If you have earned ten thousand dollars in a year and spent it all you are exactly where you started, but if you have earned only one thousand dollars and saved two hundred you are ahead of where you were a year ago.

"Take care of the pence; the pounds will take care of themselves."—Lord Chesterfield.

The prosperous man of today saved yesterday—the prosperous man of tomorrow is saving today. After the war prosperity brought high wages to many but few have permanently benefited by them. Believing that this condition would last indefinitely, they threw away their money on a foundation on which to build future success.

Now with falling wages, the conditions are still favorable to the young man who is employed. The dollar is still being deflated and money set aside will continue to increase in purchasing power. Do you know a man who is saving his money? Keep your eye on that chap—he will be the prosperous man of tomorrow.

Last week a laboring man came into the office of Tulsa's oldest and largest Building and Loan Association. He opened a savings account. "You may be interested," he said, "in knowing how I happened to put my money here." We were interested. "My employer is a rich man—I believe he knows a good thing when he sees it—and he's saving his money with you—if it's safe enough and profitable enough for him—it's good enough and profitable for me."

We pay from 6 to 9% per cent on every dollar you deposit here.

The most desirable thing about any investment is safety. This association invests your funds in absolutely the safest of securities—first mortgages on HOMES. A first mortgage of any kind is sound security but first mortgages on homes are best of all because they consist of small amounts loaned on homes of people who really want to own them, who are making payments on them, an increasing margin of safety with each payment.

While giving greater security to your savings we are able to pay you a higher rate of earnings because our depositors share in the profits of this co-operative institution.

Why take chances on doubtful investments when you can secure a high interest rate here combined with absolute safety? We are the oldest and largest Building and Loan Association in Tulsa and offer you unsurpassed loan and savings service.

For six years this association has been helping finance home building and home owning. We secure money for this purpose by selling our stock to people with capital or to those who wish to save a certain amount each month.

Help us help the home builder by subscribing for shares of the Tulsa Building & Loan Association. (Tulsa's oldest and largest Building & Loan Association.) You can buy paid up stock or pay for it by the month. Shares of $5.00 more a month equated. Your money in this association earns from 6% to 9% and is 200% safe.
