

WATCHING THE ECLIPSE.

The Results of the American Expedition in Africa.

MANY PICTURES WERE SECURED.

The Frightful Velocity of the Moon's Shadow—The Cape Ledo Expedition Was Very Lucky, but the Englishmen Were Disappointed.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 24.—The Cape Ledo expedition was very successful. The direct view of the eclipse was secured at the Cape Ledo, and the Englishmen were disappointed. The direct view of the eclipse was secured at the Cape Ledo, and the Englishmen were disappointed.

Many Pictures of the Eclipse. We obtained seventy of these pictures before the middle of the eclipse and ten after totality. There was no hitch in the working of the apparatus, which was all automatic, and with an extra photographic assistant it would have been easily possible to take twelve or fifteen hundred pictures of the eclipse in all its partial phases, had there been any object in so doing.

Professor Pickering's cloud recorder, for giving complete pictures of the eclipse, was mounted on a secure foundation and operated in connection with other apparatus.

Everything Worked Smoothly. The beginning of the total eclipse or the second contact was lost in the clouds and could not be observed, and the third contact was obscured by clouds and was not observed. The end of the eclipse, or fourth and last contact, happened in the clouds. Neither photographic records nor optical observations of it were possible. The pneumatic movements of all the photographic apparatus worked smoothly and accurately. Not only were the durations of the exposure regulated with entire precision, but the exact time of the beginning and ending of every exposure was automatically recorded by the same apparatus.

Pneumatic Valves a Success. It is demonstrated that the principle is correct, and with pneumatic valves it is shown to be possible to operate five telescope cameras as easily as two or three have been managed in eclipse work heretofore.

The Ocean Party's Luck. The United States ship Pensacola has returned to Cape Ledo from her trip out to sea to observe the eclipse. The ocean party was only partially successful, and they bring back a few pictures of the eclipse, some of which will be serviceable. The longitude of St. Paul de Loanda will not be determined by the exchange of cable signals with the Royal observatory at Cape Town.

The Moon's Terrifying Shadow. The colors, a few minutes before totality, both on land and in the sky, were magnificent. The moon's shadow when approaching our station at Cape Ledo, swept over the ocean toward us with a velocity actually terrifying. The water, which in the sunlight had been of a lovely indescribable peacock blue or green, assumed a dark livid green, almost black, and the result was a gloom of the ordinary daylight, under the gloom of the eclipse broke into a foam of lurid purple.

The Sky Turned Livid Gray. There was no marked change in the daylight until the sun was nearly covered. Then a strange portentous pallid semi-obscure spread over the earth. The sky turned livid gray, inducing the feeling that some terrible catastrophe was near at hand. The atmospheric conditions varied very much during the eclipse, alternating with cloud and sunniness, but the results were disappointing. During the total eclipse several prominences attained great distinctness and brilliancy. The air temperature fell slightly below its normal, the lowest temperature occurring several minutes after totality.

The Object of the Expedition. The object of the expedition was to study the corona or halo of brightness that surrounds the black disc of the moon when the sun is hidden behind it. The American observers undertook to find out whether the corona actually changes its form during the two hours or more while the moon's shadow is crossing the Atlantic. They undertook also to find out whether the fine rays that appear to radiate from the poles of the sun, and which form an interesting feature of the corona, are curved or not.

The Conclusive Answer to this question is of fundamental importance—i.e., if these rays are curved there can be no mere optical effect of, for instance, "light shining through holes in the sun's chromosphere." If these rays are curved there is likely to be the fearful mortality among current speculations regarding the origin of the corona. The American observers undertook particularly to find out whether the corona has now the same long equatorial extensions that it had in January last, and which were first brought prominently to attention by American observers in the eclipse of August, 1878. The results of the expedition will be announced more fully later.

The Mysterious Corona. No one now thinks the corona to be due to our atmosphere, though there are still a few physicists who do not believe to be either a solar or lunar appendage in the true sense of the word. For, if the corona has no reality and is a mere atmospheric effect, then all the solar light that can fall on our atmosphere must come from the body of the sun. But the shadow, within which the sun does not shine, is often seventy miles or more in diameter; so that, with no other source of light than the body of the sun, the sky of the eclipse observer would be as dark as night, whereas it is brighter than full daylight. This proves conclusively that the light which we get so abundantly during an eclipse comes from the corona, unless we assume that there is a fairly dense lunar atmosphere.

It may be regarded as practically settled that the corona is a real physical thing and that it belongs to the sun itself. Five hours in a century, at a liberal estimate, in which to secure the facts relating to a phenomenon so complicated and important as the corona cannot be regarded as a very liberal allowance. Enough information about it has now accumulated, however, to give some hint of the things we don't know about it, and that is worth a great deal.

SEVENTEEN MINERS ENTOMBED.

The Horrible Fate of Laborers in a California Mine. MILTON, Cal., Dec. 24.—Messengers from Angel's camp, Calaveras county, report that a cave in occurred at the Ulica mine, located at Angel's by which twenty men were imprisoned. Three of them escaped without serious injuries, the remaining seventeen, with the possible exception of two, are supposed to have been killed outright. The two possible exceptions were at work in a drift some distance from the main body of workmen and may possibly be alive. The cave was caused by the heavy rain soaking the earth, and the mine is said to have been improperly secured. Great excitement prevails, as many of the miners are married and with families. Sixteen men were at work in the shaft some distance from the main body of workmen, and may possibly be alive.

Burglars Blew Her Head Off. TAKENBY, Ill., Dec. 24.—Mrs. Paul Robert had her head blown off by burglars in her husband's jewelry store last night while attempting to prevent three desperadoes from carrying off a tray of diamonds and jewelry. Her husband, who was in the back yard at the time, heard the shot and immediately ran into the store and found his wife lying dead on the floor. He picked up a revolver one of the murderers left behind and sprang through the window after them. He shot several times at the burglars, but they escaped. A large posse are now in pursuit of the villains, and if they are caught will likely be lynched.

Elizabeth's New School. ELIZABETH, N. J., Dec. 24.—The new Batlin high school at Elizabeth was opened last night for public inspection, and the building was crowded. A life size portrait of Joseph Battin, who presented the building to the city, hangs in one of the rooms. It is a gift to the school from members of the board of education and Superintendent J. A. Dix.

Mr. Waite was engaged in the practice of law in Toledo, where he was much respected. His death, which was due to Bright's disease, occurred after a lingering illness.

Killed by a Caving Bank. MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 24.—At 7:15 o'clock a bank of earth, four feet thick, twenty deep and twenty long, fell upon three workmen who were excavating for the Union depot. Frank McLaughlin, one of the workmen, escaped with slight injuries, but Walter Bodkin and the other, who is unidentified, were killed outright. Their bodies were horribly mangled.

Walkey's Fatal Miss. SALT LAKE CITY, Dec. 24.—At North Point Charles Gilman quarreled with Joseph Walkey, a sheep herder, for letting sheep trespass on Gilman's land. What is a cold in the head? Medical authorities say it is due to uneven clothing of the body, rapid cooling when in a perspiration, etc. The important point is that a cold in the head is an inflammation of the lining membrane of the nose, which, when unchecked, is certain to produce a catarrhal condition—for catarrh is essentially a "cold" which nature is no longer able to "resolve" or throw off. Ely's Cream Balm has proved its superiority, and sufferers should resort to it before that common ailment becomes seated and ends in obstinate catarrh.
