HERE'S A CHANCE TO BUILD HEALTH

C. F. Winder Opens Institute for Various Kinds of Beneficial Exercise

TO WRITE OF HEALTH IN JOURNAL ARTICLES

C. F. Winder, founder of and teacher of the Winder system of scientific physiological and dynamic osteopathic exercise, has become a resident of Wilmington and has opened an institute at No. 834 Market street, the Jenney building. Mr. Winder has the reputation of being one of the foremost exponents of healthful exercise in the country, and he is a successful practitioner wherever he has gone. He himself is a picture of health, "big, breezy, muscular" as a friend puts it, "who with a most convincing equipment of biceps and other knotty arguments is putting fresh energy and life into many men who are making Wilmington."

Since coming to Wilmington a few months ago Mr. Winder has enrolled many of the best known residents of this city under instruction at his institute. He gives each case his personal attention, and prescribes his exercises for each individual, as applicable to that particular case, based on an examination. The exercises require five minutes on arising and five minutes before retiring daily. Mr. Winder also gives certain specified exercises at his institute.

Just how many beneficial problems would be more correctly solved if the solvers could approach the problem in the good humor that comes of perfect health we have no means of knowing," says one Wilmingtonian, who is enthusiastic over the improvement he has obtained under Mr. Winder's direction.

Mr. Winder has many testimonials from medical authorities, and other well-known men attesting the success and benefits of his system. He has consented to write a series of articles for THE EVENING JOURNAL dealing with the subject of health, how to preserve or renew it, etc., the first of which will appear on Wednesday next. These articles will be printed each week, and doubtless will prove of interest because of being prepared by a man who is an authority and because of the beneficial suggestions they will contain. Mr. Winder will be glad to hear from anybody interested in healthful and beneficial exercises or from persons desiring to have restored or upbuilt health.

HINES-BELL NUPTIALS TODAY

A wedding of interest to Wilmingtonians, and especially to members of the Delaware Division of the Sunshine Society, was the marriage of Miss Lulu Hines and C. Avery Bell, in St. John's Episcopal Church, at 6:30 o'clock this morning, by the Rev. Charles H. Holmead, curate of St. John's. The wedding was celebrated quietly, owing to the recent death of the bride's father, and was witnessed by only a few intimate friends. Mr. and Mrs. Bell left immediately for a wedding trip to Milwaukee.

Mrs. Bell is one of Wilmington's best known and most charming young women. Mr. Bell is President of the Rescue Branch, which is the men's branch of the Sunshine Society, and has long been one of the strongest helpers in the work of the Sunshine Society. He is connected with the Company, pharmaceutical chemists, in this city.

SHIP SOLACE AGROUND.

Supply Boat was on Her Way to the United States Ship, Idaho. By United Press Leased Special Wire. BARNSTABLE, Mass., July 30.—Wreckers from the Boston navy yard arrived here today to aid in floating the United States supply ship Solace, which today is hard and fast aground on a rocky bar just off this harbor. The Solace went aground while on her way to the United States ship Idaho in Cape Cod bay and has been unable to get off under her own power.

DEATH OF LUCIE GREEN.

Graduate of Delaware College and a Young Man of High Character. The Middletown Transcript says: This community was deeply pained to hear of the sudden death Wednesday Lockwood with whom he was playing bridge. He told Mr. James Ritchie that he was not feeling like engaging in the game. Still he took his racket and had played several sets a post for support, and even while making some peculiar remark about the pallor he thought his face was showing, sank slowly to the ground and died almost before anyone could bring medical aid to relieve him. Dr. Ritchie and Vaughan came on a burry summons to him, but was unconscious when Dr. Vaughan arrived and dead when Dr. Ritchie came shortly thereafter.

Mr. Green was the youngest son of the late William and Mrs. Eliza Green, whom together with four brothers and one sister are mourning his untimely death. He was a fine young man of the most estimable character, and his sudden taking off will bring sorrow and regret to a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. Mr. Green was a graduate of Delaware College, and a member of several of the fraternities at his Alma Mater. He was of a studious bent of mind, and like his gifted father before him, fond of knowledge, especially of the practical sciences. He had been engaged for a number of years before his sad death in experimental biological researches with a view to discovering some formula having a germicidal action upon intestinal ferments especially in the colon. He made numerous proves of his formula upon various small animals, and his friends believe that had his gentle and useful life been spared to reach the wanted span, his labors would have resulted in some useful discoveries to science and humanity.

He was 29 years old, unmarried, and lived in Middletown with his widowed mother, Mrs. Eliza Green, to whom the entire community extends its deepest sympathy in the bitter loss. Mrs. Green and daughter, Miss Eliza, were in the West at the time of his death visiting another son, Victor, who is living in Colorado. She and her son and daughter were to arrive in Middletown this (Saturday) afternoon. Funeral services will be held at his mother's residence Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock, and the remains will be interred in St. Anne's Cemetery. Relatives and friends are invited to attend without further notice.

REHOBOTH HAS FAST HORSES IN SPECIAL RACE

Militiamen Bring Crowds To Sussex Resort in Height of Season

MANY WILMINGTONIANS IN THE PLEASURE CROWD

REHOBOTH, Del., July 30.—This resort has come into its own again in popularity, judging from the crowds here this week. Of course, the presence of the militia in camp brought many visitors, but aside from that the hotels and cottages have had many inquiries every indication is for a thriving August. The health of the resort is excellent, and inquiries among the physicians indicate that there is no sickness here. Rehoboth has entirely recovered from its scare of last year, and every precaution is being taken to safeguard the health of the resort.

The Hotel Henlopen and the Hotel Bratton are well-filled with visitors, as are the many private cottages. The visitor can feel assured that he can find quarters.

Many Wilmingtonians are spending some time here. Mr. William J. Horrigan and his mother, Mrs. Klenke are at the Hotel Henlopen, and Mr. Horrigan came down Wednesday to stay the remainder of the week.

Wilkin Strahorn, of Wilmington, has been a visitor here this week. John Govatos, Wilmington merchant, is occupying his cottage here. Mrs. Dockety is entertaining many guests at Cheltona Cottage.

Colonel Edmund Mitchell, of Wilmington, is one of the most ardent champions of Rehoboth and spends many weeks here. Mr. Mitchell, of E. B. Riley, formerly of Wilmington, entertained many friends at his cottage in the pines this week.

Mrs. Clarence M. Dillon, of Wilmington, spent the week here. Mrs. A. J. Mulhausen, of Wilmington, was a sojourner here during camp week.

The Board of Town Commissioners will meet on the first Thursday in August.

Guthrie, Mr. Charles McIntire, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Davis, Mrs. Ellen Hull, of Wilmington, Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Vickers, of Georgetown, Wilmer Burton, of Ocean View, and Miss Birdie Fields, of Salisbury, Md., were guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Tappan recently.

Avery Cottage, on Maryland avenue, to Mrs. C. A. Rouse, of Baltimore, Md. The Cosy Cottage, on Baltimore avenue, to Horace Wiltbank, of Milton, Ormanda Villa, on Baltimore avenue, to Mrs. Annie Hazard, of Lewes.

B. R. T. RECEIVES MANY VISITORS

Continued from First Page. understanding between you and your employers. Highly praiseworthy is the relief department of your association. The state makes no adequate provisions for the widows and orphans caused by the many dangers which are incident to your business.

Your members have the consolation of knowing that if they meet untimely death, by aident or otherwise, your Brotherhood will go to their loved one with substantial aid and relief.

"May the good work of your association greatly increase. May your stay among us be both pleasant and profitable." Mr. Handy was introduced as the nearest man to President Taft the committee had been able to obtain. Mr. Handy eulogized trade unions. He stated that he had heard capitalistic states that unions were a detriment to the laboring class, but he said it was due to the workingmen that the safety brake was dopted through their concerted action. He further spoke of the subject of regulating the hours of labor and on the wages which have been raised by the members of the laboring class, but his organizations. He referred to the railroad as a development of the road of our ancestors with their wagon roads, stating that the civilization of the people was judged by their road or highways, whether in ancient Rome or this country. Mr. Handy declared that as the present road is only a development it was nonsense to say that they were private affairs or run for the stockholders' interest alone. Speaking of government ownership he said that if the men on the railroads were uniform like the letter carriers the roads would be more satisfactory to the public.

The speaker concluded by urging the men to stand by their organization and he urged them to take an interest in the greatest union—that of the body politic.

CRIPPEN NERVOUS AS HE NEARS PORT

(Continued from First Page.) "Wait until Sunday." Dew sailed upon the Laurentic under the name of "Dewhurst." This wonderfully clever pseudonym almost deceived the passengers of the Laurentic. But when a tall set up, square-jawed person, wearing a green ulster and a tweed cap, of furtive air and suspicious mien, boarded the steamer, he had "detective" stamped all over him. A shrewd-eyed American woman perceived the disguise and also learned that Dew was not then sure that the suspects on the Montrose were Crrippen and Miss Le Neve.

Woman Agitated Dew. This woman waited until Dew was within hearing and remarked to a friend: "I wonder who is that little, pale-faced man wearing blue glasses."

Dew was literally "agog with excitement," he shadowed the nervous passenger for some time. Then when a newspaper man on board the Laurentic, who was to be met at Falm Point when the Montrose's suspects were landed, sent a wireless asking for permission to land here, Dew was on his trail in an instant. The newspaper man is still laughing. The arrest of Crrippen is a personal matter with Dew, for when first assigned to the case in London he went to Crrippen and secured a solemn promise that he would make no effort to escape before Scotland Yard had solved the mystery of his wife's disappearance. Crrippen promised faithfully, then vanished. Three days later the dismembered and lime-eaten fragments of Mrs. Crrippen's body were found in the cellar of the doctor's home.

Kendall Suspected "Robinson." Despite the government's embargo on private or press wireless messages from the Montrose, further details of Captain Kendall's methods of convincing himself that "Robinson and son" were really Crrippen and Miss Le Neve, are coming to light.

Kendall first suspected the pair as they came on board and he noticed that the "son" was pressing the "father's" hand in the tenderest possible manner.

When "Robinson and son" went in to lunch, Captain Kendall went to the hat rack and examined their headgear. He noted that the name "Jackson" was stamped in the band of the father's hat, while the band of the son's hat was stuffed with paper. The son's clothing fitted miserably. The "captain-detective" saw that "his" trousers were drawn together with a safety-pin. Later Kendall noted that "Robinson, senior," carried a wicked looking revolver in his hip pocket.

Captain Kendall drew "Robinson" into conversation and learned that the man was well acquainted with Canada and the United States.
