Plowing is an essential part of the preparation, and if possible should be done in the fall. But as a general thing there are late vegetables which often prevent this being prepared as it should be get the full benefit of the winter freezing. However, in this region there is less disadvantage in this than in the south, where the ground never freezes to a great depth.

The soil must be rich, or made rich by the addition of well-rotten barnyard manure. It is never advisable to put fresh manure on the garden, as it interferes with the cultivation of crops and requires too much moisture for its rooting during the summer. Jackson, Miss., April 27.—Arrangements were under way here today to extend assistance to the residents of Braxton, a small town 18 miles south, where a tornado yesterday resuited in the death of more than a dozen persons, injury to a score of thers and property loss estimated in excess of $100,000.

The business section of the town was virtually wiped out, and many homes destroyed and damaged.

Grant's Birthday Being Celebrated Today At Galena

Springfield, Ill., April 27 .- Trials of courage through which Ulysses S. Grant passed and rebuffs he endured before Illinois hesitatingly accepted him and sent him into the Civil war, from which he emerged as the vic-torious commander-in-chief, are retorious commander-in-chief, are re-called here today on the ninety-ninth anniversary of his birth.

Here it was that the future presi-dent took command of his first regi-ment, the twenty-first Illinois regi-nient, as colonel. This one of the world's greatest soldiers applied three times in Springfield for a chance to serve in the struggle which he fore-saw meant the "doom of slavery" be-fore his worth was recognized and ap-pointment given him. pointment given him.

"Political colonels" stood in his way. After ogganizing a volunteer company in Galena, Ill., he left it, realizing that his nine years in the regular army should be put at once at the service of the union.

Celebrating Birthday Galena is celebrating Grant's birthday today. This city where General Grant had his home when the war opened and where he left his wife and children honors the day as its greatest. Senator J. Thomas Heffin of Alabama is the speaker of this year's celebration.

Even War Governor Richard Yates however, repulsed him, "I'm sorty to say, captain," he told the former army man, "there is nothing for you to do. Call again." until danger of frost is past. Beans, to do. Can again.
cucumbers, tomatoes. melons and Remaining in Springfield until his corn are easily frosted and should not finances ran low, Capt. Grant called a second time at Governor Yates' of-fice, this time at the governor sinvi-tation. He was given a desk in the adjutant general's office and put to work drawing lines and filling in blanks. "Any boy could do my work," history records him as saying. He re-mained faithfully at the fask, how-ever, and on May 14, 1861, was given title of "mustering officer."

His first duty was mustering in the regiment he was later to command, the seventh congressional district regiment at Mattoon. From there he proceeded to two other points, mus-tering in soldiers, and on May 20 closed this work and drew a voucher for $130. His pay had been at the rate of $3 a day, but he did not receive the money until long after.

Returned to Galena. Out of funds, lonesome, poor and dejected capt. Grant returned to Ga-lena. Offering his services then to the adjutant general at Washington and receiving no response, he came back to Springfield. His reception differed little from that on his first visit. Governor Yates, it is said, did not think of giving him a command. Without political influence and without a chance with the orators and other wire-pullers who crowded about, he was considered a "military dead-beat" by politicians, and a "decayed soldier" by citizens, it is recorded by the his-

General Fremont, who wanted a regi-ment in northern Missouri. "Send me." was Grant's request to Governor Yates. To transportation," was the governor's reply. "I'll find transportation," the colonel insisted, and on July 2, 1861, he issued his first marching orders. ASSISTANCE FOR TORNADO SUFFERERS
