Work at the Temescal tin mine is progressing, and this noted mine will soon add its wealth to the mineral products of California. At present there are seven men employed at the mine working night and day, to drain it of water. Everything betokens the speedy development of this long unworked mine.—San Bernardino Index.

Garcia, the Sonoranian centenarian, a copy of whose baptismal certificate we published at the time of our centennial celebration, appeared as witness in a case on trial before Judge Howard yesterday. Notwithstanding his 100 years and 7 months, his answer was as ready, his eye as bright and his movements as lithe and active as those of many a man on the sunny side of forty.

Mr. Fred Rimpau arrived from Sonora yesterday, and while there he visited Magdalena, Ures, Cuernavaca and other places. He will return in about fifteen days, accompanied by San Francisco parties, for the purpose of selling the San Pedro mine, in Ures district, of which he owns a half interest. The sale is to be for $15,000. Mr. Rimpau has interests in several mines in Sonora.—Arizona Star.

At the meeting of the Board of Supervisors yesterday, Supervisor Egan offered a resolution, which was adopted, for the refunding of the indebtedness of the county, amounting to $138,000, in bonds of $1000 each, said bonds to run for 20 years and bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent, to be annually exchanged for bonds of the county now outstanding at not less than par and accrued interest at the date of said exchange.

With the first of this month a new time table was put in operation on the Pennsylvania Railroad, by which the actual running time between Chicago and New York is reduced to twenty-five and a half hours; or, from San Francisco to New York, to five days and twenty-three hours. The California train daily, from Chicago, will be run via the Fort Wayne and Pennsylvania line, as a "Limited Express," and will be composed entirely of Pullman cars.

The celebration of the Chinese festival of "Kung Dak" will commence on the 20th instant and close on the 23rd. This festival is celebrated every three years and was instituted, we are informed, by an intelligent Chinaman, for the purpose of conciliating or mollifying the evil spirits in behalf of all indigent dead Chinamen whose relations or friends are too poor or too careless to offer the sacrifice usual when a Chinaman suffers of this mortal coil.

A Virginian friend hands us the following: After the celebration at Yorktown, the American citizens thought of Rochambeau and of all the gallant gentlemen who gave America her liberty. But after that we thought of other things. We saw before us a man who was a greater traitor than Benedict Arnold. We knew from history that Benedict Arnold fought bravely as a gentleman but we have heard from history since what a traitor he was. We are glad that when we are a greater traitor than Benedict Arnold in Mahons of Virginia.

All old Angelenos will regret to learn that Sister Anne, who for almost twenty-six years past has been a resident of Los Angeles, on Monday last left our city for Emmetsburg, Maryland, via the Southern route, to spend her remaining years at the Mother House of her Order. Her career here has been a most useful one and while she will be missed by all, her loss will be especially felt by the poor and afflicted, to whose interests she was at all times ready to devote herself, no matter what the sacrifice of personal comfort might be. Sister Anne was one of the band of five Sisters of Charity who arrived in this city in January, 1856, and who at once commenced their mission of mercy by founding a school and an hospital. Of these pioneers the only one now remaining in the city, we believe, is Sister Scholastica, Superior of the Convent School. Sister Anne carries with her to her new home the best wishes of all who knew her.

Herr Zander, a German musical director, has made public some interesting observations on the relations between the condition of the human voice and that of the weather. He says that apart from the inevitable changes in the intonation, purity and strength of the voice resulting from physical variations, such as illness, nervous tension, and the like, he has noted other influences of a barometrical nature that seem to indicate approaching changes in the weather. In clear weather about to change into that of a dismal, rainy character his voice became weak, and showed a tendency to grow deeper. In wet weather, and during the change, the voice became bright, clear, and strong, and was disposed to strike too high a pitch. Herr Zander was a lecturer of singing in a high school for many years, and had ample opportunity of verifying these conclusions.

Epitaph said to be copied from a tombstone in the cemetery of Montmartre: "Here lies Joseph X, who for twenty years after the death of his mother-in-law and died in the certain hope of a better world beyond."

According to the last census the value for building and repairing on the Pacific coast from 1870 to 1879 is eleven Southern and 100 Northern States aggregated $18,000,000.

"A Widow Hunt."

A fine audience gathered in Turn Verein Hall last night to witness the first representation of "A Widow Hunt," by the Owl Dramatic Club. This brilliant comedy, under the name of "Everybody's Friend," has been a favorite one on this Coast since its first rendition, about twenty years ago, by the genial and gifted Perry. It bristles with points, is full of innocent fun, and conveys a moral that might well be heeded in many a household.

The Owl Dramatic Club has arrived at a stage of proficiency in their art that exceeds that of many traveling combinations with high-sounding names, and an evening spent with them is sure to be an enjoyable one.

As "Major Wellington de Boots" Mr. Lehman displays to advantage his now acknowledged talent as a low comedian, and gives evidence, also, with the finishing touches and experience that time will bring, he can take high rank in that line of business if he chooses to adopt it. "Felix Featherly," the generous, the self-sacrificing friend, was ably portrayed by Mr. Tom Barnes. Miss E. Witherby, as "Mrs. Swansdown," was so graceful, so much at ease, and so life like in the portrayal of the pretty and charming widow, that the last of the impression upon the mind that such acting could only come from one who had trod the boards in a professional capacity. Mrs. C. H. Edwards, as the neglected Mrs. Featherly—neglected, because her husband's time was absorbed in doing acts of friendship for others—played her part with modesty and quiet dignity. Mrs. C. J. Tipton, as "Mrs. Major de Boots," that "superior woman," contributed much to the pleasure of the evening. Mr. Seward as "Frank Leebrook," Mr. Clinton as "Trap," and Mrs. W. H. Carlow as "Fanny," did well the parts assigned them.

The new scenery was pretty and in charming taste. There was some annoyance on account of a defect in the gas meter, which marred the first part of the performance; but, of course, it was an accident and will not occur again. We can assure our readers that if they will join in "A Widow Hunt" on next Thursday evening, they will have a rare treat. The same programme will be repeated on Thursday and Friday evenings.

Adjourned until 10 A. M. to-morrow.

One Benefit of a Superstition.

The Chinese believe that the falling of any shadow over an ancestor's grave is an insult offered to that ancestor; and, strange as it may seem, this belief is likely to preserve the empire from a nuisance which it will take a large territory not being collected in any particular spot, but every family having its own graveyard, the telegraph companies who have received charters to construct lines find it exceedingly difficult to place their poles where they will not cast a shadow over somebody's great-grandfather or mother-in-law. At first, ignorant of the belief of the people on this subject, they undertook to put up their poles along the highways without regard to graveyards. Since then they have learned better; for, wherever the Chinaman found a black streak across any grave, he did not wait for the officials to come along and right the matter, but proceeded to lay the pole right across the grave, no matter what the consequences. This sort of thing grew rather monotonous for the telegraph people, and now they bury their wires beneath the surface. China will, therefore, have the first complete underground telegraph system in the world.

Bavarian journals express themselves greatly disgusted at the sentence of a private in the army to three days' imprisonment because he applied the epithet of "You villainous beast!" to the bawky horse of one of the officers. The chief of the regiment is said to have behaved toward an officer's horse.

A miller in Peru, Indiana, fell asleep in his mill and bent forward till his hair got caught in some machinery, and was jerked out, and of course it awakened him, and his first bewildered exclamation was: "Damn it, wife, what's the matter now?"

A SOCIAL BOMBHELL.

A Sensation in the American Colony in Paris.

(Lucy Hooper's Paris Letter.)

This is not exactly the season of the year for social scandals, but a small bombshell of this nature has just burst in the American colony, causing a good deal of amazement therein. The facts in the case are as follows: A little more than a year ago an English gentleman arrived in Paris to take up his abode in this delectable city. He was accompanied by his wife, a very beautiful American lady, who was, I understand, a Philadelphia by birth, and, moreover, was the divorced wife of a New York merchant—divorced, be it understood, for no fault of her own, but on account of sundry misdemeanors on the part of her husband. This pair, being elegant in manner, hospitable, and of cultivated tastes, soon gained an entire hold on the most exclusive circles of the American colony. They took a hotel in the fashionable quarter of Paris, that of the Parc Monceau, and furnished it in the most elegant style, the gentleman's equipages, the lady's toilettes and jewels, were on the same magnificent scale. Her viatic costume of emerald green velvet, trimmed with Russian sable, and of cultivated tastes, dressed of the kind that ever issued from Worth's famous establishment, the cloak alone costing $4,000. The source of the gentleman's wealth was said to be a mine in Colorado or Nevada. This summer an elegant villa at Deauville received this fortunate couple, who continued there the hospitality of their Parisian home, entertaining a succession of guests, among whom were numbered representatives of some of the proudest and most exclusively American families who reside in Paris. The other day the London Daily Telegraph contained a report of the suit for divorce brought against the English millionaire by his first wife for bigamy and desertion. A Colorado Court had alone been called upon to sever the tie that united them, and no warning or information of the proceedings had ever been granted to Mrs. X—No. 1, who is an English lady. The English Court, after some severe, but, I must say, just remarks, respecting her petition. Mr. X—will therefore be at liberty to marry Mrs. X—No. 2 all over again. Mrs. X—No. 1 told me she will be glad to do in order to legalize his second marriage either in England or France. I have never had a chance to meet the pair in question, but I have heard that the lady is a really remarkable specimen of American beauty. According to the newspaper report of the London trial, Mr. X—had no reasonable cause of complaint against his wife, the ground on which he obtained his Colorado divorce being that of "cruelty." Rather a comical plea for a man to urge against a woman. I wonder if she pinched him, or scratched him, or whacked him over the head with a broomstick, or what? He richly deserved the latter form of punishment, I think.

Jimmy Tuffboy has gone into the amateur detective line, and promptly struck a good claw. His theory has been all along that his father wasn't giving him quite enough change. He hid behind the garden wall the other day and distinctly heard the "old gent" promise the new servant girl a carriage ride to the beach the next evening when his mother was to be out of town. Jimmy knew just what to do. He didn't spring it on the old man at all. He just told his mother, and she half-heartedly and had more fun watching the show than he would to go to the circus. It is needless to add that his mother's out of town visit was postponed.—Weaver's Waggoner.

The use of the American word "caucus" is becoming common in England, and the London newspapers are puzzled over its derivation. It is said to come from "caulkers' meetings," held by Bostonians and aimed against the Revolutionary times. All conferences to arrange for concerted political action were soon called "caulkers'" and in time the term became "caucus."

A recent religious census taken in Prussia shows that that country contains 17,465,462 Protestants, 9,205,136 Catholics, 363,790 Jews, 42,618 Dissenters, and 22,066 persons professing no religion.

In his diary of European travel the Shah of Persia says that an Englishman who discloses a policeman is instantly put to death.
