Strong Opinions About the Southern Pacific Franchise.

Ex. Mayor Lukeus Warmly Supported by Public Sentiment.

A Number of Interviews Which Show the Condition of Public Opinion.

PASADENA, Jan. 4 .- The sentiment against the action of the city council in granting the Southern Pacific the Broadway franchise increases daily. The following expressions of opinions show the condition of public opinion:

Mr. Wotkyns, of the real estate firm of Wotkyns Bros. -I consider that the council had no right to override the wishes of the people in this matter. That petition showed plainly how the people stand in this matter.

Mr. J. C. Fitzhenry-I admire the stand Mr. Lukens has taken in this matter against the Southern Pacific company. The action of the council in deposing him and passing that franchise was a bad piece of business and will act as a boomerang in the end. The board has no right to confiscate any man's property without first seeing that he is paid for damages inflicted.

Mr. Joseph Simons-The stand which THE HERALD is taking in this matter is making it many friends in this city. Mr. Lukens and Mr. Hamilton are all right in the stand they have taken. The action of the council in pushing through that resolution has a queer look.

Mr. Bennett of the Passadena Land and Water company—I: looks strange that the council should insist on granting this franchise to the Southern Pacific company without seeing that the rail-road arbitrates when the people wish it. Mr. Johnson—The Herald is on the right track in this affair. Things have always been too one-sided in this town and the council have run things to suit

Mr. Forsythe-I do not believe the action of the council Wednesday in passing that resolution is legal. Mr. Lu-kens' stand was correct, and he should receive the support of the people.

Ed Kennedy—This thing should have been settled differently. The people wanted the property holders paid.

CUPID AND PSYCHE,

His name upon the ship's books was Edward Braithwaite Colchester, but between Tilbury and Sydney harbor he was better known as Cupid. His mother was a widow, with four more olive branches, absolutely dependent on her own and Teddy's exertions.

At the best of times kindergartens for the children of respectable tradespeople are not particularly remunera-tive, and the semidetached villa in Sydenham was often sorely tried for petty

But when Teddy was appointed fourth officer of the X. Y. Z. company's steam-ship Cambrian Prince endless possibilities were opened up.

If you will remember that every-thing in this world is ordained to a certain end, you will see that Teddy's future entirely depended on his falling in love-first love of course, and not the matter of fact businesslike affair that follows later.

After his second voyage he obtained a fortnight's leave and hastened home. Being fond of tennis and such like amusements, he was naturally brought into contact with many charming girls, who, because he was a strange man and a sailor, were effusively polite.

Then he fell hopelessly in love with a horribly impossible girl, and in the excitement of the latest waltz proposed and was accepted on the strength of a fourth officer's pay, an incipient mustache and a dozen or so brass buttons.

During the next voyage his behavior toward unmarried women was marked by that circumspection which should always characterize an engaged man.

He never allowed himself to forget this for an instant, and his cabin had for its chief ornament a plush framed likeness of a young lady gazing with a wistful expression over a palpably photographic sea.

Now, it was necessary for his ultimate happiness that Teddy Colchester should learn that, like his own brass buttons, without constant burnishing a young lady's affection is apt to lose much of its pristine brightness, and that too much sea air is good for neither. He ticked off the days of absence, and as his calendar lessened his affection in-

At Plymouth a letter met him. a jerky, inky schoolgirl epistle, evidently written by a writer very cold and miserable, and the first reading stunned

Had he seen a little more of the real world he would have been able to read between the lines something to this ef. fect: "You're Teddy, three months away, and I'm madly in love with a

Then he would have noted that the writer was staying in Salisbury, after which he would have hunted up his home papers and discovered that the Royal Wiltshire yeomanry cavalry were encamped at Humingtoon Down.

But as he had only seen life through a telescope he could not do this. Consaquently his pain was a trifle acute. His mother wrote him four pages of

But though he wondered at any girl jilting her boy she could not help a feeling of satisfaction at its being still in her power to transmute three-quarters of his pay into food and raiment for her brood.

Next voyage the Cambrian Prince had her full complement of passengers, and the Kangaroo Girl, whom perhaps you may remember, was of the number. At Plymouth a little reserved girl joined, and as she is considerably mixed up in this story you must know that she rejoiced in the unpretentious name of Hinks.

For the first week or so Teddy held very much aloof from the passengers, engaging himself entirely with recollections of the girl for whose sake he was going to live "only in memory."

Being an honest, straightforward young fellow, he of course followed the prescribed programme of all blighted ove affairs. He began by pitying himself for the sorrow he was undergoing, then went on to picture the future that might have been theirs had she married him, but before they were clear of the bay he had arrived -e invariable conclusion and was pitying himself for pitying the girl who was foolish enough to jilt such an entirely estimable young man as Edward Braithwaite Colchester. One moonlight night, after leaving "Gib," he was leaning over the rails of the promenade deck feeling sympathetically inclined to the world in general when somebody stepped up behind him. It was Miss Hinks. She prefaced her conversation with two or three questions about the sea, and he made the astounding discovery that her voice possessed just the note of sympathy he required for his complaint. Ho had felt sorry for her because him because she had been told exaggerother people snubbed her, and she for ated stories about his love affair. gether they made rather a curious when, under the supervision of the Kangaroo Girl, the shore party for Na-ples was being organized, Miss Hinks was tacitly left out. Somehow the impression got about that she was poor, and no one cared about paying her ex-

But eventually she did go, and it was in the charge of the fourth officer. When she thanked him for his kindness, he forgot for the moment his pledge "to live henceforth only in a memory.

The Kangaroo Girl, on discovering that Miss Hinks had been on shore under the escort of that "dear little pink offiwas vastly amused and christened them Cupid and Psyche.

Now, the end of it all was that Teddy began to find himself caring less and less for the the thumb stained photograph in his locker and more and more for the privilege of pumping his sorrows into a sympathetic ear.

By the time they reached Aden he had convinced himself that his first love affair had been the result of a too generous nature, and that his second was the one and only real passion of his life.
At Colombo Miss Hinks went ashore with the doctor's party, tiffined at Mount Lavinia, dined at the Grand

Oriental and started back for the ship about 9 o'clock. Teddy, begrimed with coal dust, watched each boatload arrive, and as he did his love increased. On account of the coal barges it was impossible for boats to come alongside. Consequently their freight had to clamber from hulk to hulk. Miss Hinks was the last of her party to venture, and just as the doctor, holding out his hand, told her to jump the hulk swayed out, and she fell, with a scream, into the void.

Then before any one could realize what had happened the barge rolled back into its place. Miss Hinks had disappeared.

Teddy, from half way up the gangway, tore off his coat, leaped into the water, and at the risk of having his brains knocked out dived and plunged between the boats, but without success. Then he saw something white astern and swam toward it.

. . . The half drowned couple must have come to an understanding in the rescuing boat, for next day their engagement

The Kangaroo Girl gave evidence of her wit when she said, "It was fortunate they were Cupid and Psyche; otherwise they would find love rather insufficient capital to begin housekeeping

Teddy wrote to his mother from Adelaide, and she, poor woman, was not best pleased to hear the news. But a surprise was in store for us all. On the Cambrian Prince's arrival in Sydney Miss Hinks was met by an old gentleman, who, it appeared, was her solicitor. On being informed of the engagement he examined Teddy with peculiar interest and asked if he were aware of his good fortune. Miss Hinks

Half an hour later we learned that the girl whom we'd been pitying for her poverty was none other than Miss Hinks-Gratton, tho millionairess and owner of innumerable station and town

How to Preserve Old Manuscripts. The paper or document, after being cleaned or brushed, is washed on both sides with a transparent adhesive solution. Sheets of imported white silk of the most delicate fabric, large enough to give an ample margin or border to surround the document to be preserved, are then placed on each side of the record and pressed. The pressure causes the silk to adhere closely to the document, which is then treated to a coating of paraffin for the purpose of bringing out and making more legible the writing thereon. This process seals the document permanently from any danger of disintegration or fading of the ink, and also is a protection against insects or mice, which might proy upon the ancient records.
