In view of the fact that statements bave been published that might lead to wrong conclusions in regard to the real condition of Charles Leddin, the man who was struck on the head by the station agent at Inglewood, inquiry has been made, particularly as he has seemed worse today and yesterday. He is not by any means out of danger yet; the fever which showed itself yesterday may be but the presence of the inflammation which is so dreaded in cases of this knd. It wist be remembered that he was brought to the receiving hospital, and from his skull, that his brain was exposed. The wound has permitted of a posed. The wound has permitted of a part of it being sewed up since that time, but only a part, and yesterday his tempreature rose considerably, so that it had to be opened again.

His real name is Bartholomew F. Leddin, not Charles Lidden, as the papers have had it heretofore. "Charlie" is a nick-name given him by one of his employers, when he first began to work for the firm which has employed him for so long. Houlahan & Griffith then had the contract for putting up the city and county building at Salt Lake, and it was while at work on this building that Leddin had a fall from the fourth story to the basement of the structure. This was some four or five years ago, and he made a good recovery, being apparently as a good recovery, being apparently as sound as ever, until this assault was made upon him. He was a very powerful man, as strong as an ox, as his companions say, and not addicted to any bad habits.

HERIEIGHTIETH BIRTHDAY. The relatives and friends of Mrs. C. A. Miller mes last evening at ber home on Arcadia street to celebrate her eightieth birthday. The house was prettily decorated with roses and other flowers which nted with roses and other flowers which grow in such profusion here. Grandma or Auntie Miller, as she is familiarly called by many of her friends, has endeared herselt to all by her kind and loving heart. While her head is crowned with silvery hair, she is sociable peasant company for young as well as older people. She was kindly remembered with love tokens from her children and friends with sincere and hearty congratulations on this, her eightieth birthday.

Those present were: L. F. Miller, Mrs. L. F. Miller, Hallie Miller, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Spalding, Mr. and Mrs. E. Michener, Miss Udell.

He had just drawn up his team in front of Page's candy store on West Colorado street, within two or three feet of the sidewalk, leaving room for a team to pass between him and the crowd. When Officer Beebe ordered him to move on he said he had business there, and was just going into a store, when the officer Sneider at the horses' with Special Officer Sneider at the horses' heads started around in the direction of the jail, with the crowd following. When they arrived at Union street the officer told the man to go home, but he said he had business to attend to in town. After some parley the man was placed in jail and formal complaint entered against him for disturbing the peace by riotous and tumultuous conduct. He gave his name as August Kowalsky, of Lamanda Park, and expressed himself most vigorously and emphatically to the effect that he couldn't see in what manner he had disturbed the peace, or for what reason he was arrested. He was finally induced to pay his fine, under protest, seeming to pay his fine, under protest, seeming to think he could get vindication afterwards in the superior court. The fine

STANFIELD AT ANAHEIM.

STANFIELD AT ANAHEIM. An injustice was done Stanfield of Whittier in the report of the bicycle race yesterday, charging him with cutting across lots and being ruled out for place at the finish. The first report brought into the judges' room by the post checker in from corners on the course was to the effect that Stanfield flunked, the checker not gerting him, and the judges marked him. Later reports from other checkers coming in showed that Stanfield passed all of them, having been somehow missed by the first checker. Stanfield is a decent fallow and as the report, may do him fellow, and as the report may do him harm in the Riverside race next week, in which he is entered, this correction is telegraphed. Way along Ocean avenue. The procession consisted of three tandems and half a dozen single wheels. It was the first bloomer parade of the season and was undeniably the most novel affair seen thus far. All last evening the young women who formed the parade were rushing around borrowing all the bloomers of the success, judging from appearances. Miss Zadee Maxwell, attired in tan bloomers and leggins, tan Eton jacket and cap, rode on the front seat of the first tandem, and in her wake followed Helen Eaton, Gene Finney, Hettie and Elsis Milner and Christine Kurts. All along the line they were lustily cheered, and bloomer parades will be frequent no doubt hereafter.

There are many ladies here riding bloomers of the side daily in crinoline bloomers, white sweater, and leggings and tan cap. She is one of the most expert wheelmen here and her costume is one of the most bewildering.

Proprieter Reinhart ran no chances of a stray spark setting fire to his hotel, and soon had leads of hose all over the roof. The hotel help is splendidly disciplined, and there was not the slightest danger of fire, a fact which was fully realized by the unteer fire department and it was promptly on the scene. Lines of hose were laid from every contiguous fire hydrant and three or four streams were soon playing on the flames.

The fire ate its way rapidly to the front of the building, and flames were bursting from every window. An effort was made to confins it to the upper floor, but the inflammable nature of the material of which the building was composed made this impossible.

After the flames had raged furiously for half an hour the roof fell in with a crash, sending a myriad of sparks heavenward. It was a sight rivaling the grandest pyrotechnical dsiplay and was visible for some distance. Soon after the falling of the roof the floor between the first and second stories dropped in and with a roar the flames flared up for a moment and then died down. When the sun rose nothing but a few smouldering embers and the blackened walls to the height of six feet remained to mark one of the greatest conflagrations in the town's history.

THE DANGERS Of many patent medicines is evident by a case of a little child, who was poi-oned the other day in Boston. These medicines are gotten up for the pur-pose of making money, and little attenpose of making money, and little attention is paid to their preparation.

A drug may itself be harmless, but when they are mixed together they often times make incompatible and poisonous compounds. When you hear of a remedy containing many different drugs, be careful. When they are prepared by men who know nothing of the human system, beware.

DR. SHORES' REMEDIES are prepared under Dr. Shores' care and at-pared under Dr. Shores' care and attention. He has made a life study of his preparations, and any remedy that bears the picture and signature of Dr. A. J. Shores, is genuine, and you can feel sure that Dr. Shores was present in its preparation.
