

FOR THE ANTRIM MILLIONS
Charming Mrs. Jenkins of This City the Heiress
VALUED AT EIGHTY MILLIONS

This Enormous Sum Will All Go to the Lucky Angelina

The Proofs of Direct Descent Are Obtainable in the East, and the Lady Will Leave at Once

Mrs. Charles Jenkins of the Hollenbeck hotel is a prosperous millionairess, and that in no uncertain degree. She is a direct descendant of one of the late Lords Antrim of County Antrim, Ireland whose estate now amounts to over $80,000,000. Mrs. Jenkins is a strikingly pretty woman, and no one would be better qualified than she to grace the position it is likely she will soon occupy. She leaves for the east next Wednesday to examine the genealogical proofs of her accession to the estate.

Mrs. Jenkins was seen by a Herald representative at her home last evening, and gave the following account of the good fortune into which she has fallen. The Antrim family, owning nearly all of the county of that name in Ireland, consisted of three brothers, who lived at about the time of William Penn's voyage to America. The two younger brothers were warm friends of the Quaker explorer and in 1682 they joined his colony on its journey to the new world and ultimately settled in New Jersey.

But one of them, John Antrim, survived the perils and hardships to which the early colonists were exposed and to him Mrs. Jenkins is related.

Meanwhile the elder Antrim, who held the estate and the title, pursued the even tenor of his way in spite of the land leaguers of the Molly Maguires, and finally married. The estate continued in the family, passing from father to son until about fifteen years ago, when the then Lord Antrim became involved in a quarrel with a tenant who shot and killed him. There being no issue left the vast possessions passed into the hands of two aged Irish relatives, the last of whom died some four years ago, leaving no direct heirs.

The American claimants were notified, and there are at present some 125 litigants, each of whom hope to get in ahead of the fair Angelina, who is certainly entitled to it by the laws of the mother country. The estate is at present in the hands of the governmental representative of Great Britain, but will be turned over on the presentation of the proper proofs.

Mrs. Jenkins's grandfather is a descendant of George Antrim, who in turn is directly connected with the John Antrim who was one of the original owners of the estate. Her genealogical tree is traceable back as far as George Antrim, and there have been letters from eastern relatives stating that the complete train of proof is obtainable from the records of the family.

Mrs. Jenkins will go from here to Grand Rapids, Mich., where several relatives reside, and from there will go to Boston. Her many friends in this city certainly regret the necessity which calls her away, but the good fortune awaiting her across the seas will greatly compensate her for the loss of their society.

A FOUR-HANDED DISCUSSION

Held by the International Educational Labor Association

Collectivity vs. Individuality Was the Subject Handled by the Four Speakers at Royal Bakery Hall

The International Educational Labor association held its regular meeting at Royal Bakery hall, spring street, at 2 p. m. yesterday. The preliminaries were soon disposed of and the appointed debate then took place. The question submitted for discussion, "What is the difference between individuality and collectivity?" was handled by four chosen speakers. Mr. E. Fulton and Mr. Biddle took the side of collectivity and Mr. Oliver and Mr. J. R. Armstrong the opposite. Mr. Biddle gave the usual definition of his side of the debate and was listened to with appreciative attention. He said collectively humanity can accomplish and has accomplished much progress in the industrial arts and sciences; that man is a social being and has the same tendency to collect as crops of water. Singly he is a helpless outcast, unprepared to combat the forces of nature, but in the aggregate is a mighty power for good or evil. His remarks were frequently applauded. Mr. J. R. Armstrong followed in a strong appeal against unnatural restrictions of every kind. He said man-made law was the greatest blunder of the century, because 99 out of every 100 of our statutes were opposed to nature.

He deprecated so much unnecessary legislation and pleaded for the grand principle of freedom incorporated in the preamble of our federal constitution. His remarks were received with earnest attention.

Mr. E. Fulton took the floor and handled his side of the argument in a masterly manner, showing how unity of action can operate and how mankind in a collective brotherhood can eventually abolish the present inharmonious and establish justice and perfect good will. He was highly appreciated and the opposing members to think his case hopeless.

Mr. Oliver then proceeded to wipe the floor with the collectivists. He claimed that the drift of the times was steadily toward the repeal of old laws meant reform, not the enactment of new ones. Every great reform in the past was revolutionary.

Mr. Morris followed with a few good points on the individualistic side of the question and the audience on both the latter gentlemen frequent marks of appreciation. The question was put to vote and the audience gave an overwhelming endorsement to the side of collectivity.

The question for next Sunday's discussion is Resolved, That Socialism is un-American; and four of the best speakers have been chosen to handle it on both sides. The meeting will be at the same time and place.

THEY WORK HAND IN HAND

Collusion Between Contractors and Saloon Keepers Charged

By Which the Greater Part of the Laborer's Earnings Goes Into the Hands of the Whisky Men

For some days past there has been more or less talk about labor being imposed upon by their employers, generally contractors, in the payment of wages. In brief, it is claimed that the contractors "stand in" with certain saloon men and that the latter get the greater part of the earnings of the laborers. The claim is made that the contractors will not pay the men in cash, but in checks payable on the next regular pay day. For instance, if the pay day of the contractor is the first of the month and a man works a week following that time, on being paid off in place of receiving his cash he gets a check payable on the regular pay day, which would be three weeks later. As most laborers working for a dollar per day do not have bank accounts they are generally hard up and want their money as soon as it is earned. In case this is asked for the laborer is referred to some saloon keeper, who, the employer says, will cash it for him. The laborer presents his check, which the saloon keeper cashes, and if he charges him no commission it is the most natural thing in the world for the man who has been accommodated to at least buy a drink and treat the barkeeper. This worthy "comes back," if the man has enough money to warrant "buying him," and in law minutes the laborer has acquired that wealthy, generous feeling that comes with frequent potations, and he is ready to cash it for him. If he could get it off his shoulders. Generally there is a crowd of hangers-on about these saloons who are not backward about making the acquaintance of any man who has the "price," and almost before he knows it most of the cash advanced by the saloon man for the check has returned to him and the laborer wanders out of the place broke.

This sort of thing is alleged to be quite general, and it having been brought to the attention of the W. C. T. U. and other temperance organizations, they have been trying to find some way of correcting the abuse. No plan of action has been agreed upon, but the advisability of bringing the matter before the city council has been discussed. It has been suggested that perhaps the council has the power to pass an ordinance requiring weekly pay days on non-city work, just the same as they regulate the hours and forbid the employment of Chinese. If this could be done, and the same action taken by the supervisors, it would undoubtedly do much to correct the evil complained of.

On the other hand, it is claimed that if the laborers want to drink they will go to the saloons anyway, but the temperance people claim that if they are not sent to the places and compelled to put themselves under obligations to these men they would not be so much danger. It is possible that some of the representatives of the W. C. T. U. may appear before the city council today.

TEED WILL NOT SIGN IT

He is Opposed to the New Law Relating to Circuses

Unless Mayor Rader is Here by Wednesday Next the Ordinance May Be Vetoed

Mayor Frank Rader is due home from his eastern trip tomorrow or Wednesday, and until he arrives the fate of the recently enacted ordinance increasing the circus license is not known. Colonel Freeman G. Teed, who is acting chief executive of the city during the mayor's absence, will not attach his signature to the proposed law. That much is certain. He may not veto it, preferring if Mayor Rader is back at his post on time, that the latter assume the responsibility of action in the matter. Teed is, however, opposed to the increased tax at this time. While believing, with most of the other councilmen, that circuses cannot be touched off too hard, the fact that the Wallace people in good faith tendered to the city clerk an order upon their treasurer for the full amount of the old license, which order was accepted, makes the president of the council feel that an undue advantage has been taken to the side of the circus people, and that the city cannot afford to obtain money in the manner attempted in the present instance.

Colonel Teed does not say that he will veto the ordinance. He may not, in fact, do so. If Mayor Rader is not here by Wednesday and Teed's name is not attached to the proposed law by that time, the ordinance becomes effective by charter provision just the same. And if Rader's approval will be sought through the method of default above described.

SERVICES OVER W. J. THOMPSON

Friends and Relatives Greet in a Farewell Tribute
Religious services were held yesterday afternoon at Kregolo & Brease's undertaking parlors over the remains of W. J. Thompson, the man who died last Wednesday night from the effects of drinking poisoned wine.

Rev. Mr. Fuller conducted the services, which were largely attended. The widow of the deceased, his two daughters and three sons were present, as were representatives from the Royal Antrim and A. O. U. W. Quite a number of floral designs were received. Very impressive music was rendered by a double quartet, that sang "Nearer My God to Thee as the crowd passed out.

The body will be shipped to Chicago tomorrow morning and interred in the family plot in Oakland cemetery.
