WORKINGMEN SEE PROTECTIVE RESUL

Sixty-Four Make Tour of Belgium and Germany and Find Conditions Good

HEARTY WELCOME ON RETURN

More Poverty in One District in England Than in All of Germany

LONDON, May 7.—A party of sixty-four workingmen who were sent to Belgium and Germany by Alfred John Bridge in order to investigate for themselves the conditions prevailing in those countries arrived back in London after a tour extending over twelve days. Before departing for their homes in the country—they came from all parts and were representative, officially and otherwise, of their fellow workers in many of the chief industries—they were entertained at luncheon at the Hotel Cecil. While none was expected at such a stage to state definite conclusions, resulting from his study, an opportunity was tion. They were told that the work ing classes in a country with tariffs were forced to live on black bread, horse flesh and offal. What the Tariff Reform league desired was nothing more than that men, whatever their political views might be, should ascertain the truth for themselves.

GERMANS LIVE WELL

Councilor Williamson, secretary the Hyde and District Operative Cotton Spinners' society, said he was not connected with either of the orthodox political parties, but he should have a report to present regarding a tour from which they had learned a great deal. As to the conditions of the working people in Germany, he had not seen their like in this country. While in Germany he had fared as the people fared, and he wished for nothing betthat to have been an electioneering tion in New York, beginning June 9. fabrication. The two things must point to the prosperity of the country. He was not convinced that tariff reform was the right thing. But on this question also he had an open mind. Never yet had he been told what tariff reform was, but when he had a proper the event position of tariff reform has been told what the reform the event position of tariff reform a good term and then back to the knew the exact position of tariff reform he should be prepared to consider it seriously after what he had seen in Germany. The tour had given him much food for reflection.

The knowledge they have gained they will spread among their fellows, and the eyes of the workingmen of England will be opened to a state of affairs that cannot fail to appeal with irresistible force.

Viscout Ridley, who presided at the luncheon, gave the party a hearty welcome on their return. They represented the genuine British workman, and he trusted that they had had an instructive tour. This was not a political move on the part of the Tariff Reform league or any other body. They owed it to the initiative and enterprise of Mr. Bridge, to whom they had every reacon to be grateful. From the point of view of those who believed in tariff reform they welcomed the idea, because the public knew the kind of statements that were circulated about the conditions of the working classes under protection. They were told that the working classes in a country with tariffs were forced to live on black bread, horse flesh and offal. Pointers of Value to Housekeeper Contained in a Bulletin Recently Issued

WASHINGTON, May 7 .- The government of the United States is understood to be the only one in the world with a record of two cook books to its credit. The department of agriculture RAYER-To Joseph and Effic Rayer, 1530 has issued one now on the cooking of East Forty-eighth street. vegetables. It is by the late Maria Parloa, and with the one recently is-sued on the cooking of meat, it is asserted, it makes a cooking library that would carry almost any housekeeper through the period of high prices with a minimum of financial damage. Miss Parloa was one of the scientific housekeepers of the country, and was recognized as an expert on cookery of orts. She was never directly connected with the department of agriculture, but her writings were recog-nized as standard and she was re-garded as an authority on household economics

ABOUT 140 RECEIPTS

The bulletin on the cooking of vegetables contains about 140 recipes, most of them for the homely and familiar vegetables, but many of them for vegetables the very names of which are unknown to the average house-keeper. But the author of the bul-letin says that all of the vegetables referred to are easily grown, and that there is no reason why they should not be raised in any kitchen garden as an aid to variety in the tables. The bulletin goes into some of the practical features of preparing vegetables. One pointer is that a little salt will make cold water a good thing in which to soak all head vegetables, like cabbage, lettuce and cauliflower, the plants being put head down in the water, so that worms will have a chance to crawl out. It is also shown that a very little baking soda added to the water will make old vegetables tender. The cook is told, also, how some vegetables are injured by over-cooking and why. COOKING CABBAGE One of the features of the work that will appeal to the mere man is how to cook cabbage without "smelling up" the louse. When it comes to cooking such a homely thing as cabbage one might think there was but one way to do it, but the book contains five recipes, all of which are said to be good.

Cauliflower, which as Mark Twain was wont to say is nothing but cabbage with a college education, is spoiled in cooking oftener than any other vege-table. Miss Parloa tells how this can be avoided and how to make cauliflower appetizing and harmless. Parsnips, she admits, have too pro-nounced a taste to ever become generally accepted, but there are ways of cooking even these that will make them palatable. Some of the strange vegetables that are enumerated are celeriac and kohl-sorts of vegetable soups, salads and salad dressings, savory drippings, sauces and the like. In fact, there appears no particular reason why average family should not turn ve tarian altogether and become independent of the meat trust.

ENGLAND'S QUEEN SNUBS PESTIFEROUS GRAND DAMES

Changeable Committee Women Given Pointed Rebuke

LONDON, May 7.—A decided snub was recently administered by the queen to the committee of one of the numerous societies in which her ma jesty is interested. It seems that the committee was anxious for the queen to fix an early date for receiving the members of the society in the grounds of Buckingham palace. Although of the opinion that it was rather early in the year for open air functions, her majesty consented to their solicita-tions and fixed a day. Subsequently, however, some of the committee, which includes several society dames, thought it might be wiser to postpone the re-ception until the warm weather set in and hied themselves to the palace fully expecting there would be no difficulty whatever in altering the date. Much to their chagrin and confusion, they were informed that her majesty having graciously consented in the first in stance to the date suggested, in spite of her own doubts as to its suitability, could not possibly fall in with the proposal for a postponement, and the re-ception must be held according to schedule.
