PANHANDLE STATE FAIR OPENS TODAY

taking on attractive appearance before many visitors at the fair have passed it by unnoticed. Memphis is one of the live cities in this part of Texas and her people know how to arrange an attractive exhibit as well as to build a reputation for a clean town. Memphis, the home of beautiful churches and a Carnegie library, is also in a great cotton producing country and has one of the best lands, and one of the best commercia lorganizations in the Panhandle. Whenever anything else comes along that will make for the development of their city, they'll take it up. You'll miss it if you miss the Memphis exhibit at the fair.

Randall County.

The exhibit from Randall, our neighboring county, arrived yesterday and their booth was in competent hands last evening. It is safe to say that when completed the exhibit from Canyon and Randall county will compare favorable with any others in the exhibit. The people of Randall are not only enthusiastic to have the best school in Northwest Texas, but they have also harvested a wheat crop of thousands of acres, much of which would have been a good crop in any country. Randall county will also be well represented in other departments at the fair, including livestock, etc.

Lubbock County.

Lubbock county, the home of the Sudan grass and the county that made Sudan grass famous, will be here in all her glory. The exhibit was not in the hall yet but evening but a force of carpenters were at work on the booth and the exhibit will be in today. While Lubbock is fast becoming a railroad center she is not forgetting her farming interests as her exhibit at the Panhandle State Fair will attest. Lubbock county will be in at the winning good and strong and it likely to have but few if any superiors.

Deaf Smith County.

Another county that was here good and strong last night was Deaf Smith, whose capitol is Hereford.

Hereford was second only to Plainview last year when it came to distributing the prizes and the enterprising people of Hereford say that at that time that their exhibit did not do them justice. They promised to come back this time and do better. Well, they are here, and you'll find their exhibit without any help.

Hereford has taken about the largest space of any of the competing counties and they have filled it. A feature of their exhibit is their large display of alfalfa hay. It was stated last night that their original intention was to utilize this baled alfalfa in the erection of an attractive bungalow, but the desire for a better lighted exhibit called for a change in the plans.

Hereford is in the shallow water belt, is in one of the progressive sections of the Panhandle and her exhibit this year will come nearer doing justice as a representation of her abundant resources.

ABILENE FARMERS NEED 500 COTTON SNATCHERS

Special to The News.

ABILENE, Tex., Sept. 24.—The cotton crop in this section is large and the pickers are scarce. Farmers need 500 laborers at once and every effort is being made to bring them into this territory immediately and relieve the situation. The local commercial club is assisting in solving the problem and is playing the part of an employment bureau.

BUY-A-BALE MOVEMENT SPREADING TO CASTAWARD

PALESTINE, Tex., Sept. 24.—The "buy a bale" movement is spreading here every day. A committee is being prepared by the commercial club for the members of the "buy a bale" club that will name the farmer who sells a bale to any outside plug, himself to plant less cotton next year. It is the general opinion that the acreage in cattle raisers should be reduced at least 50 per cent next year.

240 Address Teachers.

Dr. Crane will address the teachers of the public schools Saturday morning at 9 o'clock on "Medical Inspection of the Child," and invites every one interested to attend.

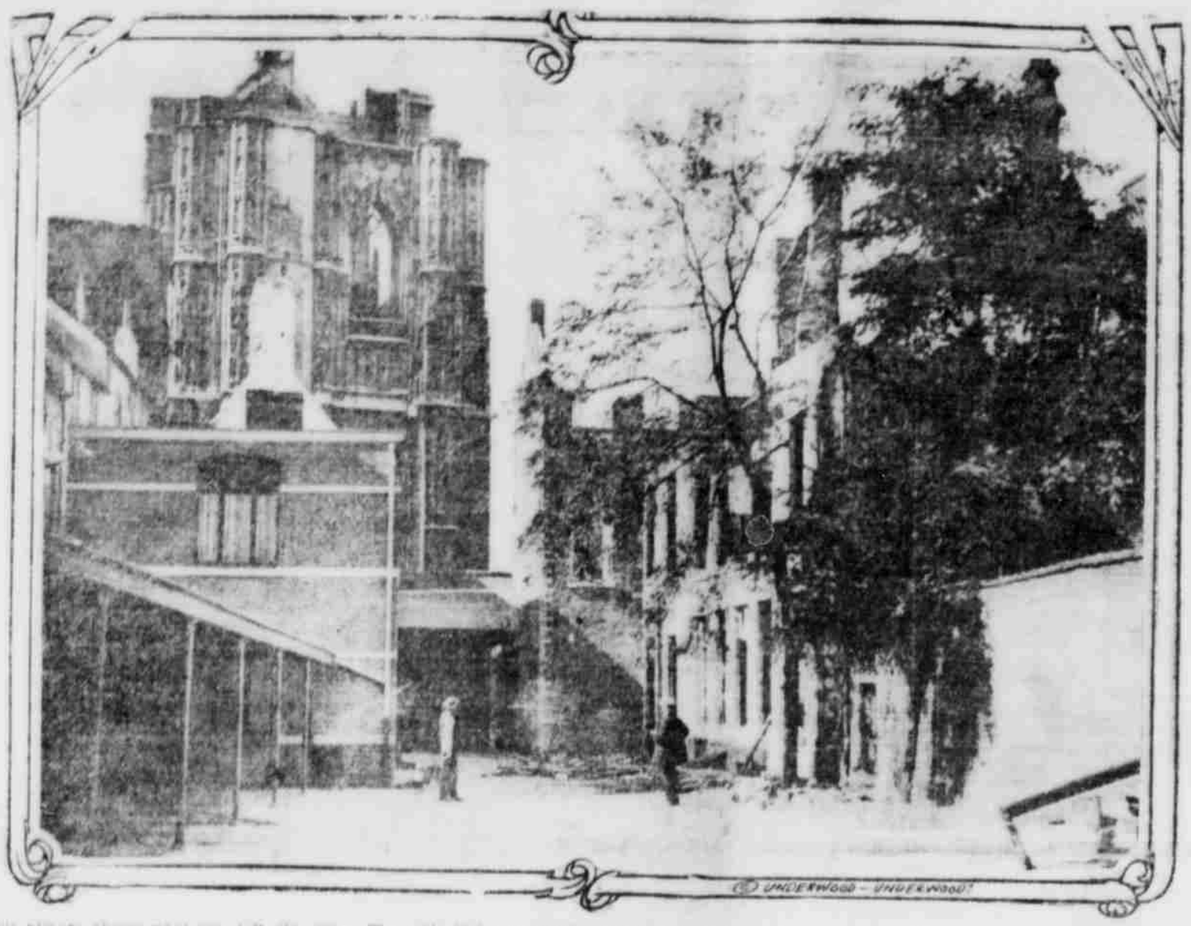
Ruins of Cathedral in Louvain After Germans Sacked the City



© UNDERWOOD—UNDERWOOD

This picture shows what was left of the ancient and beautiful cathedral of St. Pierre in Louvain, after the Germans ceased burning the town. The cathedral was noted all over the world for its chimes as well as for its architecture. Interior on the walls and pillars were torn down and smashed to bits. While the walls were left standing, it is struction than the outside. Statues likely that much work will be required to restore the building for use.

FAMINE PRICES NOT FOR LONDON

IMPORTS OF FOOD PRODUCTS IN EXCESS OF ORDINARY USES OF PEOPLE

Special to The News.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—London papers are unanimous in the opinion that England will not soon suffer famine. Imports of grain have been greatly in excess of normal because of which circumstance ports have been closed. Up to the present time forty-eight cargoes of grain destined for continental ports have been landed in England.

The ports to Canada and the United States are now open and a regular passenger service between Archangel on the White sea and London will soon be established which will make it possible for Russia to continue its shipments of butter and eggs to England.

At present the stocks of meat in London warehouses are said to be in fair condition, the greatest scarcity while the wheat, maize and barley stocks are not up per cent, and are not expected to show the slightest more than 4 per cent of normal and are not expected to show the slightest more than 4 per cent of normal.

Unusual efforts of the war office the military hospitals have been organized in Great Britain. These have been arranged in groups and each has an administrative center. Practically all the sick and wounded returning from the continent are received at Southampton, and from there those whose condition is the most serious are sent to Royal Victoria Hospital, Netley, and the other are distributed where their cases can be nearest to the best advantage.

Reassuring remarks on the expected increase the condition of some of the injured were public.

Some interest has been expressed among foreign soldiers in the field Sir William Osler's suggestion that the American army plan of inoculating all soldiers against typhoid be adopted is generally supported in the press.

Lieuten, policemen and detectives are scouring most particular every district in their investigation of the movements of aliens, persons and Americans arriving are not regarded quite as cordially as the war. The discovery of bags of railway bridges in the vicinity of a German governess employed by a prominent London family and the detection of certain persons in the possession of alien names who had refused to report them forced although by strictly regulations.

Within the last week more than 500 Germans and Austrians in London have been taken to compounds. Many of these were destitute and others were suspected of being spies.

Car Load Of Workers.

PALESTINE, Tex., Sept. 24.—A car load of laborers were brought in from Pecos county yesterday afternoon to help with the cotton crop here this year. Three more cars are expected this week. The commercial club now has men in several sections of Texas securing labor for this county. It is estimated that we will have to have 2,000 laborers here this fall if we succeed in taking care of this year's crop.

EXPERIMENTS ON FALLOWED LAND

CROPPING LAND EVERY OTHER YEAR NOT JUSTIFIED BY RESULTS OBTAINED

Special to The News.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 24.—Significant experiments in the practice of fallowing land have recently been conducted by the U. S. department of Agriculture at San Antonio, Texas. These experiments, in the opinion of the scientists in charge, demonstrate that the practice under such conditions as prevail throughout a large part of Texas is not advisable. In no case did the investigators obtain larger crops of corn or cotton from biennially cropped land than from annually cropped land. On the other hand, biennially cropped winter oats did show a slight increase. This increase, however, is probably not sufficient to offset certain other economic disadvantages incidental to fallowed land. While the experiments were confined to one locality, it is believed that they throw valuable light upon the whole question of fallowing for the purpose of storing in the soil an additional supply of moisture.

The practice of fallowing varies widely in different regions. At San Antonio the following period varies from 18 to 19 months. According to a widespread belief, land cultivated for this period soil bearing no crop, would retain so much moisture that a crop raised on it the following year would benefit materially. Since extensive experiments have been made so far as to show that the quantity of moisture sought to practically double that in land cropped annually. If this theory could be substantiated its importance in semi-arid regions is obvious. Unfortunately the results of the recent experiments, which are contained in Department Bulletin 151 of the U. S. Department of Agriculture entitled "Experiments in Crop Production on Fallow Land at San Antonio, Texas," do not bear out the contention.

The experiments dealt with three crops, corn, cotton and oats, and covered three years, 1911, 1912 and 1913.

Together with other practical experiments in raising actual crops the investigators carried on a series of measurements designed to determine the comparative moisture content of annually and biennially cropped land. These measurements showed that there was only a slight difference in the moisture content at planting and harvest times, whether the land had been fallowed for a long or only a short period. Fallowed land shows a somewhat higher moisture content in the plants at planting time for oats but otherwise the variations were negligible.

Summing the whole matter up, the investigations state that the results of these experiments indicate that biennial cropping, at least for corn, cotton, and oats, is not to be recommended for the San Antonio region.

In considering the applications of these experiments to other sections of the country, it must be borne in mind, however, that climatic conditions at San Antonio are quite different from those prevailing in the dry farming regions farther north. The mean annual rainfall at San Antonio is reported as 26.83 inches. This would seem to make crop production fairly certain, but the rainfall is so unequally distributed and long droughts so common that the beneficial effects of this rainfall are much diminished. On the other hand the winters are mild, the thermometer seldom going below 15 degrees F., and plant life can grow practically throughout the year. When supplied with sufficient moisture the soil produces abundant crops.

CLARENDON WILL COME TO BIG FAIR

THIS YEAR'S EXHIBITS EXPECTED TO BE FAR SUPERIOR TO LAST SEASON

Special to The News.

CLARENDON, Tex., Sept. 24.—The Chamber of Commerce of this city has been active in pushing the work for a good exhibit for Donley County at the Panhandle Fair.

J. T. Putnam, secretary of the Donley County Fair Association, Sam Williams, County Agent and Agricultural Demonstrator and Wm. Mellon make a splendid committee and with the assistance of Geo. Ryan, W. F. Clifford, J. M. Warren and P. A. Pentin, have gathered a splendid collection of agricultural products which were shipped yesterday.

After news readers have seen the big fair at Amarillo We hope the people will miss the greatest of all Panhandle exhibits at Clarendon, October 9th and 10th.

This year's exhibition, we can confidently state, will be the superior of any ever held at any point or at any time in the Panhandle.

Every detail of the Fair has been looked after and the entertainment of the public, the enlightment of those who desire to learn, and the comfort of both exhibitors and visitors, have been in the minds of those who have in charge the Panhandle Fair and Exposition.

We extend to the other counties of the Panhandle a cordial invitation to join with us and have spaced all of our classes to Panhandle counties.

The Swine division is open to the State of Texas, and we trust that the various breeders will take advantage of this opportunity and exhibit their animals at the Panhandle Fair and Exposition held in the center of the greatest natural hog raising country in the world.

To those who wish to combine pleasure with profit, we extend an invitation to make these two days at the Panhandle Fair and Exposition their vacation.

Rev. Osterlah of Hugo, Okla., has just closed a revival meeting at the Second Christian church, this city. There were three additions to the congregations.

The Buy-a-Balefolks are taking about all the cotton that our farmers are bringing to this market.

Our street commissioners are making valuable improvements on East First street, over which the Colorado-to-the-Gulf highway passes. This will add much to the pleasure of those who pass this way and to the value of property on this street. The work was much needed.

Good rains have fallen recently.

Personals

D. O. Pollard, superintendent of the county farm, who has been confined to his home with a severe illness for the past week, was able to sit up for a little while yesterday.

Kent K. Kerr, of Tulia, arrived in the city yesterday and will remain here till the close of the fair.

W. H. Gibson and wife of Hale Center and visiting with friends at 600 Van Buren street.

Free Methodist.

(502 Jackson Street)

The revival is still in progress. Souls are getting through to God. Beginning this p. m. at 7:45 with our regular services, W. B. Rose of Mt. Lora, New Mexico, will hold the Fourth Quarterly Conference of this year. Services to continue over Sabbath. Everybody is cordially invited.

B. H. KIPER, Pastor.

FOOD SEIZURES BY GOVERNMENT

DIFFERENT CONCERNS FINED FOR SHIPPING OF MISBRANDED ARTICLES

Special to The News.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 24.—Recently issued notices of judgment of the U. S. Department of Agriculture announce the condemnation and destruction of a great number of different kinds of adulterated and drug products as well as fines imposed on a number of the shippers.

The shipper of an imitation cognac which was offered for sale under the distinctive name of "cognac," with the intimation on the label that it was a foreign product, was fined $100. This shipper was the Acetyl Company of New York City, who were charged with selling an adulterated and misbranded product across state lines in violation of the Food and Drugs Act.

F. L. Kraft & Brothers Company of Kansas City, Missouri, were fined $50 and costs for shipping adulterated cheese from Missouri into Kansas. The Consolidated Oil Company of Cleveland, Ohio, was fined $10 and costs for shipping adulterated and misbranded grits or corpeline into New York from Ohio. Christo Brandy of Washington, D. C. was fined $10 for selling adulterated and misbranded butter in violation of the Food and Drugs Act. The product contained margarine and was ordered for sale as butter.

In a great many cases adulterated and misbranded food products that have been seized by the government are given back to those who claim the property, upon their putting up a heavy bond as a guaranty that they will not again ship the product in violation of the law. In a great many other cases no one appears to claim property and it is therefore, condemned and ordered destroyed by the United States Marshal.

Products that were either released to the claimant on the payment of a bond or condemned and ordered destroyed include:

100 sacks of bran.
25 barrels of sugar vinegar.
300 cases of salmon.
60 barrels of "Live Malt," which proved to be ordinary dark beer.
100 sacks of stock feed.
6 cars of feed barley and one car of barley.
75 cases of canned peas.
21 cans of evaporated milk.
22 cases of (so-called) Greek olives.
40 barrels of vinegar.
46 barrels of clams and one bag of clams in shell.
42 casks of beer.
19 barrels of wine.
6 cases of Dr. Sullivan's Sure Solvent, labeled: "The most wonderful medicine known for removing the following diseases from the human system, Kidney and Liver Complaint, Catarrh of the Stomach, Rheumatism, Paralysis, Nervous Exhaustion, St. Vitus Dance, Asthma, All Female Weakness and is especially recommended for all disorders of the stomach."
28 cases of West Baden Spurdel Water (which contained a filthy and decomposed animal substance.)
1000 cases of tomato pulp.
10 boxes of mint tablets.
8 barrels of bottled scuppernong wine and 3 barrels of scuppernong wine.
One carload of chickens.
132 sacks of flour.
24 boxes of ice cream cones.
275 sacks of beans.
118 sacks of dried apples.
200 sacks of corn chops.
Five 10-gallon kegs and one 5-gallon keg of blackberry cordial.
111 cases of peaches.
500 baskets of grapes.
180 boxes of macaroni product.

Tomatoes Yield $1,000 Per Acre

BROWNWOOD, Tex., Sept. 24.—One thousand dollars is the amount derived from one acre of tomatoes grown by Mr George Davis, a farmer residing near this city. The tract was unirrigated but was extensively fertilized. The crop was cultivated along modern lines.
