CORRESPONDENCE.

That Fountain.

ED. THE INDEPENDENT:—

I see that your nasty remarks a few days ago have caused that ugly fence to come down—and very properly, too. And now a little story which precious few people believe unless they wandered round the world like myself. In Brussels, the capital city of Belgium, they have a fountain called the "Manikin Piss." This little man is placed in the corner of a street exactly "makai" of the Hotel de Ville! and right from the proper place flows the purest water from a pure and perpetual spring. Why the people of that day indulged in such a peculiar idea is not either plain or explained, but the little fellow is there all the same, and what is more, on high days and Holy days they decorate him with a cocked hat, and so forth.

Now, another story. Once upon a time there was a fountain in Hackfeld's corner, not that it was Wilder than any other place or that some Hack felt necessary to stop there and take a drink, but because there was one there. If not, why not place the Carter fountain right in the now dead fountain's place? He's dead, let him replace the dead.

R.

Sowing the Seed of Discord and Dissension.

ED. THE INDEPENDENT:—

Permit me to make a few remarks anent Her Majesty Queen Liliuokalani's book. Some days past the Advertiser saw fit to make a review of the same, casting slurs upon the non-reliability and veracity of the authoress. And then, finally, it commenced to influence the natives against her in regard to what she says of the late Queen Emma, which the Evening Bulletin has at last taken up in its issue of last evening, showing that the natives generally are denouncing their Queen, in that it says that "that portion of the book which finds most condemnation in native eyes is that relating to Queen Emma."

The Advertiser wished to have that portion translated into Hawaiian, so that their eyes may see what is being said of one they thought so much of, but failed to order its own native organ to do it. It was content to find out that the book was being translated and published by piecemeal in one of our native weeklies, and then it dropped and caved in in its attempt to sow dissension amongst us.

And, now, the Bulletin is at it to "denounce the ex-Queen," and that "adherents of Queen Emma resent slurs on her memory." It may try to create such an impression, but it will never succeed. How are the natives to discuss the merits of the book and to condemn it in their eyes if they are not in a position to see the portion purported to be objectionable? There is no truth in the statement that it is being discussed everywhere. Had it taken the trouble, it would have found out, to its sorrow and grief, that the native newspaper attempting to make a translation of the book has not yet come to that portion relating to Queen Emma, which portion, in its imaginative propensity, "finds most condemnation in native eyes." It has better go and bang its head against a stone wall.

Being myself an adherent of the late Queen Emma, I fail to see how the others can be so sensitive. As far as I am concerned, the book has stated lots of truths which cannot be disputed, and it is those truths which is telling, and which I deem the organs of the oppressors of Hawaii are trying to force the sowing of discord and dissension amongst the natives, in order that they may gain a few more adherents to their false banner.

If there are really many adherents and admirers of Queen Emma who have now turned against Queen Liliuokalani, after being her strongest supporters, I say that narrow-mindedness has prevailed over them, but I for one will not follow in their wake. Having shown the objectionable portion to some friends who had heard some women say of it, convinced them of the narrow-mindedness of those who were too ready to denounce it and her.

Had Queen Emma acted as the late Mrs. Bishop, to whom the throne was once offered, by refraining from participation in a race for the throne, nothing would have been said of her, and of that I am quite certain. In putting forward her candidature placed her in an unenviable position. And I feel that it is her conduct in this matter that has been assailed, and rightly, too, and nothing more. Her moral and social standing is not attacked, and therefore, I for one am still for Queen Liliuokalani, on principle, as I had been formerly towards Queen Emma, despised by the Americans for her English proclivities.

Queen Liliuokalani's statements to not receiving any assistance from inside or from outside is too true, and I defy "the names and amounts of donations sent to her" to be given out by any of the organs of the despoilers of Hawaii, not even by any of the native political societies.

Now that "the last straw that has broken the camel's back in the natives' faith in their ex-Queen" is set at naught, permit me to say on behalf of the same natives, irrespective of the officers and members of the prominent native societies that we are still and forever for and with Liliuokalani, no matter what comes, and while opposing annexation, we hope and pray that she may come back to us and be with us and among us, for she has not alienated the love and respect of those who have stayed by her, knowing that she is striving for the good of Hawaii and its people. Queen Liliuokalani's friends are just as numerous to-day as of yore, other than those who, for pecuniary benefits, have deserted her and have cast their principles and the justness of their cause to the winds of the four corners of the earth. And in their attempt to sow the seed of discord and dissension, they have ignominiously failed.

Hoping that the foregoing will set all illusions to mislead others at rest forever,

I am,
Me ke aloha nui.

A QUEENITE.

The World's Wealth.

The wealth of the world would suffice to gold-plate England and Wales all over. The gold plate would not be very thick, for if the total wealth of the world (70,385 millions sterling) be turned into a gold plate large enough to cover the surface of England and Wales, the thickness of such plate is only 1,118,760th part of an inch. In other words, the gold plate is rather more than three times as thick as the filmy leaf which flutters in the gilder's hand, and it is not so thick as a cigarette paper.

Let us put the wealth of the world in a more solid and tangible form than gold leaf. It makes a road of solid gold from Westminster bridge to just beyond the Red Lion, at Dorking (23.9 miles), and this new road is 18 feet wide and 6 inches thick. This golden surface is excellent for cycling, and the road to Dorking, through Epsom and Leatherhead, is a favorite one—but the whole wealth of the world has been used to make this road.

If, from motives of economy, you object to plant all the world's wealth along the twenty-four miles between Westminster and Dorking, you may make it into a square band long enough to go round the equatorial circumference of the earth (24,899 miles). Gold is so ductile and malleable that this complete alteration of the shape of the world's wealth will not do it any harm.—Pearson's Magazine.

Must Have Company.

A safe world this earth would be
If every joking elf
On folly bent
Would be content
To frolic by himself.

The man who loves to rock the boat
Has never yet been known
To drop into
The briny blue
While rowing out alone.

The "didn't-know-'twas-loaded" fiend
Would free us from much care
If he'd explode
That rusty load
Out in the woods somewhere.

The scorcher, racing with the wind,
Whom all men dread to meet
Is joyless till
He tries his skill
Upon the crowded street.
