He Fought to the Last.

Colonel John Richardson said to a representative of THE INDEPENDENT that he liked his trip to Washington very much, and he felt sure that a great deal of good had been done by the visit of Hawaiians at the great capital of the United States.

This was the first trip of Mr. Richardson out of Hawaii, and he admits that he has come to the conclusion that his native country is not the whole earth, but merely a part of it.

He likes snow and sleighing, and he admires the Niagara falls. He has met a number of senators and does not appear to be extraordinarily imbued with respect for these "rulers" of the destiny of "our" country. "The ladies in Washington are charming," said the Colonel—and he wunk a wink—"and they are far better politicians and diplomats than the men."

Before leaving for San Francisco, Mr. Richardson visited friends in Philadelphia and New York, and called on the relatives of his uncle, the late Sheriff Everett, at Boston.

Colonel Richardson is very proud of his autograph album, in which can be found the names of President McKinley and many prominent senators, congressmen, generals, diplomats and others.

"If we only had won the day," said the Colonel with a sigh, "we did all we could."

And right he is.

DEATH OF THOMAS LARKIN.

Said to Have Been the First American Born in California.

The death is recorded of Thomas O. Larkin, after whom Larkin street of this city was named. He died on July 24 at his residence on the corner of Stockton and Pacific streets, from pneumonia. He was 64 at the time of his death.

The deceased was the son of Thomas Oliver and Rachel Larkin, to whom he was born in Monterey. His father was then American Consul and the boy was said to be the first white child of American parents born in California. The family afterward removed to this city, where Thomas O. Larkin, Sr., erected the first brick building still standing at 1116 Stockton street. The deceased took a prominent part in laying out the streets of San Francisco.

Mr. Larkin leaves one son now at school in Washington, and a brother, Alfred, to mourn his loss.—S. F. Call.

THE FAR EAST.

Further Russian Aggression in China.

A Dalziel telegram states that the Russians are endeavouring to secure a monopoly for the supply of kerosene in six of the provinces of China, in the return for a heavy contribution to the Imperial Exchequer in lieu of the payment of likin dues. A contract has been signed by the Russo-Chinese Bank and the Central Government, for the construction of a railway from Tai-yuen fu, the capital of the province of Shan-si, to the town of Lin-lin in Chi-li, joining the Lu-han line. The contract, which is published in extenso in the "China Gazette," is considered a direct challenge to British pretensions in the Yang-tse Valley, where, moreover, the Russians consider they have a stronghold in Hankow which can be used as a lever against British claims throughout the whole region. The death is announced of Tan-chu-len, Viceroy of Kwang-Si and Kwang-Tung.

Horrible Atrocities.

A letter received in London from Sierra Leone, west coast of Africa, says that a Mendi native, who was with the American missionaries at Rotfunk, when they were massacred by the insurgents, engaged in the uprising against the importation of the Hut tax, but who made his escape by resuming his native garb, furnishes the following account of the tragedy: "We started to walk to Sierra Leone, but had only gone half a mile when we met the war boys, who blocked the way. The Rev. Mr. Cain tried to frighten them by firing a revolver over their heads, but seeing they were determined to do mischief, he cast his revolver away and said he would not have anybody's blood on his hands. The war boys then seized the party, and Miss Hatfield, Miss Archer and Miss Kent, stripped them of their clothing and dragged them back to the mission house, in front of which the war boys cut down the Rev. Mr. Cain, and hacked him to death, and treated Miss Archer and Miss Kent in the same way. Miss Hatfield, who was very ill, was thrown on a barbed wire netting, and finally her throat was cut. Mrs. Cain escaped to the bush with a native girl, but the war boys found them and they were killed."

A Big Reception.

Queen Liliuokalani was at home this morning to her friends. The patriotic societies were well represented and many Hawaiians took the occasion to pay their respects to the Alii.

The Queen was attended by a number of the leading Hawaiian ladies and gentlemen. She was pleased to see her people and at noon she made a short speech to those present in which she urged her friends to be patient and pray to God for the welfare of Hawaii.

Colonel Richardson also addressed the assembly expressing hopes for better times.

The National Band played appropriate music during the reception.
