A Failure.

More years ago than I shall name I sought to win a good wife's fame, I knew not how—but all the same I made a shirt.

I cut, I stitched with many a tear; Hollowed it out, both front and rear, I carved the armholes wide, for fear They wouldn't fit.

John's neck I measured to be true, The hand must fit—that much I knew, I'd heard so oft. All else I drew And puckered in.

At last 'twas done. A work of art, Complete, I hoped, in every part. "Come, John," I called with quaking heart,

"Try on your shirt."

I must confess it bulged somewhat

In places where I thought 't should not, But John, the brute, yelled out, "Great Scott!

Is this a tent?"

And such behavior—language, well!

He uttered things I'll never tell—I may forget them when I dwell In higher spheres.

Oh, woman of the present day, To you's inscribed this tiny lay, You little know the man you pay Your homage to.

If his "true inwardness" you'd know, Have him your idols overthrow, And sentiment to four winds blow,

Make him a shirt.

THE LITERARIAN.

Yellow Journalism.

The following paragraph appeared in the Advertiser this morning, and is of course without the slightest foundation. It reads:

"A new and lively interest has been added to the strike that is now on among the employes of the Honolulu Iron Works by the representatives of the Federal Government.

"Yesterday morning a report to the effect that a disturbance of some sort was threatened by the strikers reached Marshal Ray and he hastened to consult District Attorney Baird. Taking with them Chief Deputy Hendry, the two officials hurried to the Kewalo works to see if there were any signs of a demonstration. It is the purpose of the Federal representatives to take a prompt and active hand in the strike if there is peril of violence and mob rule, and the trip to the iron works was an eloquent sign of the fact.

"When Baird, Ray and Hendry arrived there, however, they found nothing to support the rumor, except that one man, who had been employed in the machine shop and was among the number that left, was loitering about, acting suspiciously. The officials sent him packing. It is thought that the report of a riot was not founded upon any act or words of the responsible element of the strikers, but a wild notion of a few fanatics."
