TrueDemocracy Defined

Bourke Cockran's Terrible Arraignment of the Policy of Despotism and Plunder.

The Republican policy of seeking prosperity through plunder has already borne three conspicuously sinister fruits. The distinction between appropriations for the support of the State and for the benefit of private individuals has been impaired and threatens soon to be entirely swept twty. The representative branch of the Government by a practical abdication of its functions has sunk beneath never survive the forfeiture of public respect.

"And, above all, we have begun to show that infallible symptom of national decay which has been conspicuous in every country where justice is declining and corruption growing—the disposition to treat, as an attack upon the army, criticism or condemnation of the vilest acts of its basest members."

We are told that the perpetrators of murders and pillage will be severely punished, but whoever exposes them is denounced as an enemy of his country and of the army. Democrats are proud of the American army, for they have furnished the majority of those who have won its victories and established its glories. Because they deeply cherish its fame, so largely their own creation, they insist that the standards of military ethics shall continue to be the conduct of Washington, of Jackson, of Grant and of Sherman, not that it shall become the conduct of Waller and Hell-Roaring Jake. Democrats who are determined to discourare barbarities by the relentless exposure of every one responsible for them are the true friends of the army, not the men who would encourage demoralization by shielding from exposure or punishment the authors of nameless crimes.

"The men who have reflected credit and glory on the American army are the objects of Democratic affection; the men who bring disgrace upon the uniform seem to be the objects of Republican solicitude."

While those Republicans profess special regard for the army and while they try to shield those who discredit it they endeavor to humiliate those who dignify it. Have we not seen the battle-scarred warriors whose deeds are among the brightest pages in American history publicly insulted and practically excluded from the service, while men whose infamies have sent a thrill of horror through civilization have been given new commands? Haven't we seen attempts of unparalleled bitterness to besmirch the fame of the gallant officer whose ships bore the brunt of battle at Santiago after a long career in which no breath of slander ever touched his courage or his honor? In a desperate effort to deprive him of the credit which was his due, didn't the President of the United States actually undertake to belittle one of the most successful naval engagements in history by deciding that nobody was in command of it, that in point of fact, it was not a battle at all, but a riot, for the distinction between a battle and a riot is that one is under the direction of a commanding officer, and the other is a general or

The First Local Mint.

One of the institutions here which has the special attention of tourists as well as the local people is the Mint, which is established on Nuuanu street, opposite Queen Emma Hall. It is interesting to enter the large main working room where general manager McDonough and his corps of assistants are at work. The cool and large lanai is a proper resting place and the vaults, where the "bars" to be minted and beer are kept present a very tasty spectacle. The Mint is open from 5:30 a. m. to 11:30 p. m. and during those hours the work never ceases, Visitors after looking over the place will find first class refreshments and the purest of liquors
