

AN ALASKAN ICEBERG.

A SPARKLING CITY OF CRYSTAL IN A FIELD OF GLASS.

Fairy Land in the Arctic Regions—An Ice Mountain Planted in the Sea—Fate of the Floating Monster—An Awful Sight.

In the morning (it was light now) when the sun rose it shone on what appeared to be a field of glass and a city of crystal. Ice was to be seen all around as far as the eye could penetrate.

The whole scene shone and sparkled so brilliantly in the light of the just returning sun that one could almost fancy that this was the region of fairyland.

As it is well known that floating ice sinks deep and that there is much more of it below than above the surface of the water you may form some idea of what an immense mass this mountain of ice was.

This somersault has sealed the fate of this dangerous floating monster and its end is near. Let us watch and wait, and from our hut on the ice hummock we listen for some sound that should serve as a signal.

This is the history of nearly all the bergs that leave Behring's strait.—Herbert Batlett in The Current.
