MARTYRS OF THE MARRIAGE RING.

BY E. T. SMITH.

"May I accompany you?" he asked. "No, you must stay right here, I havn't far to go. I'm staying at Mr. Taylor's. His daughter Jennie and I were schoolmates."

"I'm glad of that, Mr. Taylor is an old friend of mine. Can't I call to see 'you 'res gestæ' he shed his vest. The mothere sometimes?"

"No, I'm invalid, and am not receiving company," she archly replied as she started off.

Once she looked back, Mr. Carter was gazing gloomily in the brook. "Say!" she hallooed back, "If Mr-Taylor is an old friend of yours, you ought to come over to see hin. He has an very nice daugeter." Then she hurried along and was soon lost to sight. Mrs. Allyn met Jennie Taylor between the house and the gate.

"Oh! Jennie, I had the most romantic adventure to day! You just ought to have seen him. He says he knows your father, and is coming over to see him. And then he is so wise, Solomon and der. Highest of all in leavening Plato, and all those old fellows don't tion he stopped in the midst of a concat-

> "But pray who is this he?" added Jennie interrupting her.

"Mr. Wagoner, no, Mr. Carter from Georgia. Here's his card, you just ought to have heard me reading his name when he handed me his card. I jumbled his name, his occupation, and his residence all together, pretending that I thought all of them was his name. I told him I was a widow, and -and a lot of other fibs! Did you ever hear of -of him before?"

"O yes, I've heard father speak of him. He's an old misogynist-can't endure our sex, I understand. You surely must have pressed him very closely to make him talk to you. But really you didn't tell him you were a widow, did

"Why certainly I did. I wish I had known that he was a woman hater, I'd given him a piece of my mind. Just to think I made eyes at him and made eay lots of nice things to me!"

"Why Evelyn Allyn! I am ashamed of you. I shall make it my business to undeceive Mr. Carter, on sight, about your being a widow. The idea!"

"All right, tell him and I'll tell him you are trying to catch him yourself! I'll tell him what a bad temper you have, and I'll make up lots of other things to frighten him off."

"Your threats will not deter me, you know I promised Mr. Allyn to take care of you. If he were to hear that you had been flirting in Sylvan Solitudes' with a perfect stranger, he'd never let you come to see me again. I am shocked at you Evelyn-shocked!" said Jennie Taylor, trying to look stern.

"Well, while you are being shocked, I'll go and shock the pantry. I'm as hungry as a wolf."

In a few days thereafter, Mr. Carter called and was presented to the ladies in due form.

After that he was a constant visitor at the Taylors'. Many long rambles they took after wild-flowers, which the golden, glad days of spring were fast flushing into bloom, or "under the green wood tree" they sat and read, or wonderingly listened to the secrets whispered by the !leafy lips above them.

One day, after Mr. Carter had left Mrs. Allyn laughingly remarked to Jennie: "That was really mean in you, Jennie, to tell on me. I shall never forgive you."

"Why?" asked Jennie.

"Because, can't you see Mr. Carter has given me the g. b. and has eyes and ears for no one except you."

"That only shows his good taste," said Jennie, laughing, "but really I thought you were getting more than your share at last." of his attentions."
