A LETTER FROM NOVA SCOTIA Karsdale, Nova Scotia,

July 24, 1922

My dear friends of Berea and vicinity, because it is impossible to write personal letters to all our friends, we have asked The Citizen to publish this letter so all our friends may read it.

We are now settled for a few weeks with my mother and sister in this beautiful place, only a few rods from the Annapolis river. The road that passes our house is one of the oldest in Canada. Only seven miles away is the town of Annapolis, formerly known as Port Royal, and settled by the French in 1605. The river at Annapolis is about one mile wide, and crossing has been by boat, until this summer, when they have completed a fine steel bridge at a cost of two hundred thousand dollars. We went from Berea directly to New York to visit with my brother's family. We had planned to make the trip to Nova Scotia together, but found, upon our arrival in New York, that my brother could not get away until he made one more trip to Porto Rica, which is the regular route of the steamship of which he is master. So we came on without him. In our party was Capt. Port and wife, and son, Ned, sixteen years old, and a baby of fourteen months, whom we called our "nascott" because of his happy nature, and a boy friend of Ned's who proved to be a fine traveling companion. These made up one car, an Oldsmobile Sedan. In our car, a seven-passenger Cadillac, were my brother's wife, a nephew of sixteen, Mrs. Hudson and myself. We left Brooklyn, N. Y., Saturday, July 8, and arrived in Karsdale, N. S., the following Thurs-

GREAT BRITAIN has no intention of asking that her war debt to America be cancelled. Premier Lloyd George has decided to name delegates at once who will come to Washington to confer regarding the refunding of the debt in accordance with the terms of the Mellon act. These delegates are to have plenary powers and are to assure the United States officials that Great Britain does not consider the American debt as involved in Europe's war debts or in the reparations. Gold shipments to pay the interest will begin in August.
