People and Pleasant Events

Cairo Well Pleased.

The Cairo Bulletin of today says of "Polly Primrose" there last night: "To say that the large audience which greeted Miss Carol Arden, Cairo favorite, in Polly Primrose, was delighted with the clever play and the other members of the company, does not begin to express it."

"The house was well filled and the audience highly appreciative. Miss Arden, who has been seen here a number of times, was given a hearty welcome by her admirers. Polly Primrose, which was first presented by Miss Adelaide Thurston in Cairo last year, is a pleasing story of southern life during the war with a pretty love story and the manner in which it is presented makes it add the more delightful."

The play, "Polly Primrose," is now controlled by Manager Williamson of the Cairo opera house and this is his company.

LITTLE DOING

In the Loving Case by the Grand Jury It Seems.

The grand jury appears to be taking its time in the H. H. Loving murder case, and no indictment has yet been returned. If one had been returned before now the case might have been tried at this term of court. Some of the attorneys interested in the case say that only one or two witnesses have been heard so far, and that no indictment is likely until next week, and as court ends Saturday, a week from tomorrow, a trial is unlikely until December.
