THURSDAY, APRIL 25, 1897. ANNOUNCEMENTS. The SUN is authorized to announce...

Its a pity about those "politicians hereabouts." Mr. Blackburn saw himself slaughtered and took his departure. He was considerate.

The street sprinkling should be in charge of the city authorities and the sprinkling district should be prescribed by the city.

After all Kentucky's new Senator will be in his seat in time to count one in behalf of the Dingley bill on the first vote that shall be taken after its presentation to the Senate. This will give increased confidence to the Republican side.

The interest taken by our contemporaries in the conduct of the SUN's editorial columns is indeed flattering, but there is a man over here, gentleman, who considers himself amply qualified to supervise them without your assistance.

KENTUCKY sends a Republican to the United States Senate from the Gibraltar district of the Democracy. Let Oregon do as well and the Senate may not be obliged to yield every thing to the Democratic members to placate them and prevent their talking to death Republican measures.

It is certainly a dark hour of Greece. Her troubles have enlisted the sympathies of the world and it is with a pang of regret that it sees the arms that should be raised against an invading enemy, threatening the government, which, by surely doing all that lies in its power to preserve the honor and integrity of the country.

In all communications or articles of any kind intended for the SUN the writers will remember that the editor of the SUN weighs considerably over two hundred pounds and that he insists on being allowed the exclusive use of the editorial "we" and "our," they will confer a favor and save a sometimes ruthless mutilation of their articles.

SENATOR DEBOE's letter to Poor from which it was sought by the Democrats to prove that he was a silverite amounted to nothing. The inference they sought to draw from the senator's words is by no means a necessary one. The chagrin exhibited by the Democracy over the result of the election is all that is necessary to show that they do not feel that they have a silverite Senator.

If an epidemic of large proportions does not follow the floods in the South the people will be fortunate. Crowded together, are thousands upon thousands of the refugees in the vicinity of Vicksburg, Memphis and other points. The conditions for breeding disease are not by any means absent. Then with the subsidence of the flood there will be an atmosphere laden with every manner of poison that can emanate from decaying animal and vegetable matter. The conditions will surely favor a virulent epidemic.

The street car bills which have been pending before the Illinois legislature for some days, and which have caused such an uncommon agitation in that state, had fair to be the occasion for an investigation that may reveal more about the business of the companies than they desire the public to know. The Cook County Republican committee has recommended that a committee be appointed by the legislature to make a thorough investigation into the workings and the profits of these companies.

BALKS AT REPUDIATION.

The information thus obtained to be available in future dealings with them and future legislation with reference to them. The press of the state is taking up the matter with approving comments and the likelihood is the suggestion will be acted on. It will most likely result in some things which will not prove the most pleasant for the companies. A reduction of fares is one of the most probable outcomes.

If the three factories of which we are assured by Mr. Hardeback shall locate here without delay Paducah will certainly experience during the summer a revival of business which will cause her to forget the trouble through which she has passed. There will be no class of labor, skilled or unskilled, which will not feel the effects of the additions to her industrial forces; no line of business that will not be improved. The plotters of labor in every line will be relieved and with the contemplated public improvements all labor will find remunerative employment. We need not stop with these three factories; others are contemplated and some are in a fair way to be located. Let no stone remain unturned that will aid in their establishment. If local capital is needed it should be invested in a spirit of liberality and it will be returned in a thousand ways in improved business and enhancement of values, while increased stability and permanence will be given values of real estate.

The election of W. J. Deboe, a Republican, to the United States Senate from the Gibraltar of the Democracy is an achievement which sets the Democrats to thinking that the unexpected sometimes happens in these days in old Kentucky. Mr. Deboe is a man of ability, who has barely reached his prime, and has an opportunity to prove himself a much larger man than the Democracy is ready to concede. The fact that he was able to command every vote cast by the Republicans, after the long and heated contest through which the legislature has just passed, is an evidence of the high esteem in which he is held by the men with whom he is associated while a member of the state Senate. It is seldom the state legislature consents to the election of one of its own members to this high office. That Senator Deboe is a thoroughly honest and honorable man, a man of exemplary habits and character above reproach, is universally conceded; as to his ability, which our Democratic friends are so free to question, we opine he will prove himself the superior of the gentleman whom he succeeds, while as to his character and standing in all other respects he is infinitely superior. Kentucky will not be made to blush by Senator Deboe as she has done for Senator Blackburn. Mr. Deboe has not been in a position that called for or gave an opportunity to prove superior ability. He has acquitted himself well in all places and positions to which he has been called, and we believe will do so in his new and elevated station. The men who have been in a position to know him best are the men who have elevated him to the highest position in their gift, and the chances are he will not be found wanting in the ability or disposition to perform its duties acceptably. We extend our hand to the new Republican Senator with our compliments.

SOME of the Democratic papers are wanting to know how the Dingley bill when it becomes a law can increase the revenue, because "a tariff that is so high as to prohibit importations must necessarily reduce revenue." It is claimed that the Dingley bill will do nothing but "increase prices and lessen consumption, while reducing the revenue." Just such predictions were made about the McKinley law. It was to do nobody good, but everybody harm by increasing prices. It was to keep out foreign goods and reduce the revenues. What did it do? It revived industries all over the country; new factories were built to employ large numbers; new industries not heretofore known in this country, were established and millions of capital invested and thousands employed. Prices were not materially increased to the consumer in any line; in most cases they were maintained at the old rates except where when increased demand led to a stiffening of prices. As to the foreign trade, against which, according to the Democracy, we had reared a Chinese wall which would not only keep out foreign goods but keep in our own goods, the results no less signally failed to verify the predictions of these false prophets. We imported enough largely to increase the revenues; we exported more than ever before in our own history, and the balance of trade in our favor was accordingly the largest in our history. In short, every prediction made by the Democracy had signally failed of verification. But the false prophets had got in their work on the credulous voters. Before they were able to see the effect of the law they had allowed themselves to be led into a repudiation of the party that passed it, on the baseless predictions and assertions of the Democratic politicians. They have mourned in sackcloth and ashes since, while the Wilson law sapped the life blood of the country's industrial system. They have learned by years of misery, of financial depression, of every kind of business trouble, not only that the Democratic theories of tariffs and their effect on the country do not prove themselves correct in practice, but that Democratic predictions relative to Republican tariffs are not reliable. They have followed "Wolf" once too often. They will not this time frighten anybody. The Dingley law will have a fair trial. It will prove itself a benefaction to the people before the Democracy has an opportunity to repeat it as they did the McKinley law.

THE AIR-SHIP STEALS.

An Incredible Story From Kansas Well Vouched For.

A Prominent Farmer Sees It Carry Off His Heifer.

Special Dispatch to the Globe-Democrat.

Topeka, Kan., April 26.—Millions have laughed at the Kansas airship, but the thing is no joke to Farmer Alexander Hamilton, who resides near Yates Center, Woodson county. The airship not only appeared in plain view of Hamilton and his family, and frightened them out of their wits, but the captain of the vessel had the nerve to swoop down upon the cow lot and steal a 2-year-old heifer. At any rate, that is what Hamilton says, and a dozen well known citizens, including State Oil Inspector E. V. Wharton, Sheriff M. E. Hunt and Banker H. H. Winter, testify that Hamilton's reputation for truth and veracity has never been questioned.

Hamilton claims that the air ship visited his place a week ago tonight. He told the country people about it, but the report did not reach Yates Center till Saturday. "Last Monday night about 10:30 o'clock," Hamilton said, "we were awakened by a noise among the cattle. I rose, thinking perhaps my building was upon going to the door saw to my utter astonishment an air ship slowly descending over my cow lot, about forty rods from the house. Calling Girl Hespia, my tenant, and my son Will, we seized some axes and ran to the corral. Meantime the ship had been gently descending until it was not more than thirty feet above the ground, and we came to within fifty yards of it. It consisted of a great cigar-shaped portion, possibly 300 feet long, with a carriage underneath. The carriage was made of panels of glass or other transparent substance, alternating with a narrow strip of opaque material. It was brilliantly lighted within and everything was clearly visible. There were three lights, one light an immense searchlight and two smaller, one red and the other green. The large one was susceptible of being turned in any direction. It was occupied by six of the strangest beings I ever saw. There were two men, a woman and three children. They were jabbering together, but we could not understand a syllable they said.

"Every part of the vessel which was not transparent was of a dark reddish color. We stood mute in wonder and fright, when some noise attracted their attention and they turned their light directly upon us, immediately after catching sight of us they turned on some unknown power, and a great turbine wheel, about 30 feet in diameter, which was slowly revolving below the craft, began to buzz, sounding precisely like the cylinder of a separator, and the vessel arose as lightly as a bird. When about 300 feet above us it seemed to pause and hover directly over a 2-year-old heifer, which was bawling and jumping, apparently fastened in the fence. Going to her, we found a cable about half an inch in thickness, made of the same red material, fastened in a slip knot around her neck, one end passing up to the vessel, and the heifer tangled in the wire fence. We tried to get it off, but could not, so we cut the wire loose and stood in amazement to see the ship, heifer and all rise slowly disappearing in the northwest. We went home, but I was so frightened I could not sleep. Rising early Tuesday morning, I mounded my horse and started out, hoping to find some trace of my cow. This I failed to do, but coming back to Leroy in the evening found that Link Thomas, who lives in Coffey county, about three or four miles west of Leroy, had found the hide, legs and head in his field that day. He, thinking someone had butchered a stolen beast and thrown the hide away, had brought it to town for identification, but was greatly mystified at not being able to find any tracks in the soft ground. After identifying the hide by my brand, I went home, but every time I would drop to sleep I would see the cursed thing, with its big lights and hideous people. I don't know whether they are devils or angels, or what; but we all saw them, and my whole family saw the ship, and I don't want any more to do with them."

"The Yates Center 'Advocate' said that Hamilton looked as if he had not recovered from the shock, and every one who heard him was convinced that he was sincere in every word he uttered. Hamilton has long been a resident of Kansas and is known all over Woodson, Allen, Coffey and Anderson counties. He was a member of the House of Representatives early in the 70s. He staked his sacred honor upon the truthfulness of the story.

NECESSARY AFFIDAVIT. The following affidavit is given in support of Hamilton's reputation as a truthful man: (Affidavit—State of Kansas, county of Woodson—ss.) As there are now, always have been and always will be skeptics and unbelievers whenever the truth of anything bordering upon the improbable is presented, and knowing that some ignorant or suspicious people will doubt the truthfulness of the above statement, now, therefore, we, the undersigned, do hereby make the following affidavit: That we have known Alexander Hamilton from one to thirty years, and that for truth and veracity we have never heard his word questioned, and that we do verily believe his statement to be true and correct.

"E. V. Wharton, state oil inspector; M. E. Hunt, Sheriff; W. Lauer, deputy sheriff; H. H. Winter, banker; H. S. Johnson, pharmacist; J. H. Suttler, attorney; Alexander Stewart, justice of the peace; H. Waymyer, druggist; F. W. Butler, druggist; James W. Martin, Registrar of Deeds; H. C. Rollins, postmaster.

One Way to Get Rid of Silver Queerly. Let the silverites have their own way and the end will not be far off.

Letting the Disease. "We cannot afford to advertise our anxiety for the free coinage of silver any more," the Philadelphia North American (rep.) declares, "unless some of the nations want free coinage at our ratio or otherwise, it is as well as humiliating to be importing the great nations to create a market for our silver. For that is the kernel of this out, and but for the desire for a market there would be no talk about free silver coinage of silver here."

GUARDED ROYALTY. Precautions Taken for the Safety of European Monarchs. In olden days royalty was protected by soldiers known as body guards, but today the duty of defending royal personages against their enemies, especially those of a private and insular character, is more often relegated to the police than to soldiers.

Chief Inspector Vapp, of the London metropolitan police, is in command of the chosen band from A division upon whom rests the great responsibility of seeing that her majesty, Queen Victoria, comes to no harm from, and is unmolested by, undesirable persons. When the queen is about to leave Windsor, or any other royal residence, the company of these royal protectors, especially those of a private and insular character, is more often relegated to the police than to soldiers.

The prince of Wales is especially protected when these since Marlborough house is particularly well guarded, there being military sentries at each entrance, in addition to the ordinary detectives and police. The special inspector who has charge of the arrangements for guarding the prince is generally a former, or a Englishman who is well conversant with European languages and customs, as his royal highness travels so much abroad. It is imperative, therefore, that the inspector shall be able to keep in thorough touch with all countries, and for this reason one who knows German, French and Russian is a necessity.

That soldiery is insufficient nowadays for the protection of royalty was proved by the incident at Leeds, when the royal party, and the king's guard is the pick of these. He has been from Piedmont, and hence is a regular devotee of the king, whose native country that is. He must also be of great stature and tried prowess. He accompanies his royal lord on all occasions during the day when his majesty leaves the palace, and at night he sleeps at the door of the room occupied by the king.

The Sultan of Turkey has always been extremely well guarded, but of late years even the most precautions have never been in constant fear of assassination. Private detectives constantly shadow his footsteps even in his own palace grounds, while a tremendous number of soldiers guard every possible entrance to the palace. He never leaves these private grounds unless absolutely obliged. Even in crossing from the palace to the mosque when he attends religious worship, the whole route, not more than 300 yards, is guarded by soldiers standing often seven deep, so as to provide against every possible contingency.

The French presidents are guarded by the "Egide de l'Yvette," or "Presidential Police," who are magnificently organized and smart. When Carnot
