SHE WAS PARTICULAR

"It's not a bit of use trying to please neighbors," remarked Mrs. Deeson. "I've done my best to be neighborly with Mrs. Harker, I'm sure. I put on my best clothes and called almost before the movers had gone away. Then that very afternoon, just to show her that I didn't want to put on airs, I borrowed some flour from her."

"I always found Mrs. Harker very friendly when she lived near me," said Mrs. Deeson's caller.

"Oh, she's friendly enough. It's just that she's a little too snippy to suit me. I used to use her telephone a lot—it was unlimited and I couldn't always be going to the drug store with my nickel, and hers was so handy that I used to go over often. She never had much to say, but I asked her one day how she liked doing her own work. She said she wouldn't mind it if she had some one to tend the door. I didn't think the remark tactful, as I had been there three times that day."

"Maybe she didn't mean anything. I always found her very willing to do for others."

"That's the way I am—always helping some one. One day I ran in to see if she had her coal range going and when I saw it was I asked her to let me put a pot-roast on and save my gas. Of course I offered to help her any time."

"Thank you," she said. "Perhaps you won't mind letting baby go to market with you; he's fretting to be out of doors and I want to bake some pies."

"Oh, very well," I said, though I don't like pushing baby cabs, "I'll take him along." I did and she acted very hateful afterward."

"That isn't like Mrs. Harker," commented the caller.

"Maybe she thought she had reason to be mad. I left her baby in front of the grocery while I went into the market and as I went out at the other door I forgot the child. Anyway—"

"I didn't until she asked."

It didn't hurt him to sit there in the sunshine, and I couldn't be expected to remember everything with so much on my mind."

"When did you remember him?"

"I didn't until she asked. I offered to go after him as soon as I had put my dinner on to cook, though I really hadn't time to go back. Still, I wanted to do the right thing. Was she satisfied? Not she! She had her hat on in a jiffy—didn't even stop to wipe the flour off her hands—and flew down the stairs as if some one was going to eat the child."

"Doubtless she was worried."

"What a fuss about a little thing! The baby hadn't cried much. A little crying is good for children. Well, she was real frosty with me for a time. But I don't bear any malice, so one day when she was baking I asked her to exchange pies with me, since it is not much more trouble to bake two pies than one. Her pies are awfully good—so are mine, for that matter, though I hate the trouble of making 'em."

"You ought to make up the extra cost of the eggs you got of me," she said.

"I never knew that a dozen eggs was more than a dozen eggs," I answered, putting them on the table, "and they are the last thing I'll ever borrow of you."

"Thank goodness! They are cheap at that price!" said the spiteful thing.

"I haven't been inside her door since then! Neighborly, indeed!"—Chicago Daily News.
