

TO USE HENEY IN PITTSBURG PROBE

Friscio Prosecutor May Investigate Alleged Bribery by Bank Officials.

AT REQUEST OF PRESIDENT

Alleged Municipal Corruption Is Referred to in Almost Every Pulpit in City.

Pittsburg, Dec. 28.—Officially there were no developments in Pittsburg's municipal scandal yesterday. No additional arrests were made and no action for $25 against those arrested last Monday night was taken. Nor was there any intimation from those operating the probe as to when the next move would be made or what it would be.

There is a rumor that Francis J. Heney of San Francisco is coming here shortly at the request of President Roosevelt to investigate the alleged bribery so far as it is connected with federal institutions. According to Washington reports, Mr. Heney was in conference with the president Saturday on the Pittsburg situation.

As Special Examiner. If he comes here it will be in the capacity of a special examiner. It is said to investigate the alleged use of money by officers of national banks to have their institutions make deposits of the city's funds. A statement was made at the preliminary hearings of the men under arrest that $175,000 had been the amount expended.

While there was no official development yesterday, the alleged corruption in municipal affairs was forcibly brought to the attention of thousands of citizens. Nearly every minister either devoted a whole sermon to the subject or made reference to it.

BATTLE RAGES TWENTY HOURS

Artillery Brought into Play After Police and Infantry Had Twice Been Driven Back.

Moscow, Dec. 28.—Officers of the Moscow garrison and the crown police are planning punishment for the revolutionaries who Saturday for hours repulsed the joint attack of police and cavalry upon a suburban town with terrible carnage. The assault upon the terrorists' stronghold in the midst of the plotters' meeting marks the bloodiest combat between revolutionaries and the military arm of the czar since the historic "bloody Sunday."

During the twenty hours of fighting Baron Cotte, chief of the czar's secret police, and Col. Muraki of the Cossack cavalry and an unknown number of their host were killed, while many of the terrorists were bayoneted and clubbed to death.

Five wounded revolutionaries were taken prisoners. Upon these prisoners will fall the weight of the government's wrath unless the secret service is successful in running down escaped participants, and this is not considered likely.

Terrorists Open Fire.

A meeting of the leaders of the revolutionists was considered the opportune moment for dealing a telling blow against the circulation of seditious propaganda. As the police approached the villa, the barricaded terrorists opened fire, mowing down the uniformed attackers.

The unexpected resistance disconcerted the police who withdrew to await the arrival of military reinforcements. For twenty hours the firing continued and the combined forces of the besiegers was compelled to retire once more. The third advance was made behind requisitioned artillery, which destroyed the building.

The lack of information leads to the belief that the sole survivors of the massacre in the ruined channel house are five mangled prisoners in the dungeon at Kremlin, awaiting the verdict of a court-martial.

Gleanings of Important News of Norway, Sweden and Denmark, with Occasional Comments.

By MARTIN W. ODLAND.

NORWAY.

The largest dairying company in Norway is at Stavanger, where three large concerns have recently been consolidated. In 1907 these concerns handled 8,000,000 liters of milk.

Emperor William of Germany, has ordered the interior wood-work for a hall in his palace from Ole M. Olson of Bergen, who is one of the most skillful carpenters of that city. The emperor saw specimens of Olson's work while in Bergen last summer and was so well pleased with it that he placed the order in question.

Some time ago the postal department of Norway conceived the idea of reducing the postage on letters between Norway and the United States to what it is within each country, and accordingly began negotiations with the postmaster general of the United States in reference to the matter. But the reply of the postmaster general was adverse to the reduction, and, for the present at least, the idea of making the change has been abandoned.

I have stated more than once, in these columns, that the crusade against liquor has made great progress in Norway and Sweden. On account of this, Norway has imported less and less wine from France and Spain, a fact which has been noticed in those wine producing countries with anything but satisfaction. Indeed, so nettled have the business interests of those nations become, that they threaten to discontinue trade relations with Norway. It is reported that already, by way of retaliation for the slight to French wine, the bank of Norway has been refused a loan of $20,000,000 crowns at Paris. Should France and Spain make good their threat, the effect on Norway's fish and wood industries would be serious.

Michael Alger writes as follows about the "horseless age" in Norway: The natural conditions of Norway would not exactly tend to make Norway a great market for motor cars. Nevertheless the automobile has arrived, and it looks as if it is going to be a stayer. While there can hardly be said to be a great number of automobiles in the country as yet, about 150 to 200, perhaps, new ones are added to the list with short intervals. The cab horse is likely to be looking for a new job mighty soon, at least in this city. About ten autocrats are now in regular service, with separate stands, and charging the same rates as the old-fashioned cabs, and the public is not slow in taking advantage of the superior mode of transportation thus offered.

Appropos transportation, the new Norwegian steamship line to New York is still a topic of much interest, but so far no reliable details can be obtained, although it is said that the agreement with the Danish and Swedish lines goes into effect Jan. 1, 1909.

SWEDEN.

The receipts of the state telegraph system during the past year were over $3,000,000.

Carl P. Osterberg, whose death occurred recently, has left a donation of $2,700 to the children's hospital at Malmö.

The annual festival of the Swedish Academy will be celebrated the 20th of December. The event occurs in the large hall in the bank building in Stockholm.

The government receives the sum of $6,750 per year for the privilege of serving meals on state owned railroads, this privilege being let to private parties.

The Baptists are about to erect a monument in Landa parish, in Holland, where the sect had its origin in this country. The funds for the monument are secured by popular subscription.

Dr. Sven Hedin, the noted explorer, has reached Shanghai, on his return from his two years explorations in Tibet. He was given an enthusiastic reception upon his arrival and the five days spent in the city were busy ones for him.

The exports from Sweden to Argentine Republic have been increasing of late years, and business relations between the two countries are of the best. The articles exported are lumber, paper, safety matches, and manufactured articles, for all of which there is a brisk demand.

Capt. Anderson and crew of the Swedish steamer "Helene Lohden" were recently rewarded at West Hartlepool, England, for heroic service in saving the crew of the English schooner "Ham Weller," shipwrecked in Bristol channel last October. The medals and gifts were distributed with appropriate addresses. Capt. Anderson was given a handsome silver loving cup, with inscription, and in expressing his thanks he said he only did what any other seaman would have done under the circumstances.

It has been found that the income of the late E. Summerdahl, a wealthy wholesale dealer of Stockholm, has for many years been taxed too little, and the authorities have decided to levy a back tax for the years 1903 to 1907 of 30,000 crowns per year. The tax for last year which was not paid has been placed at 200,000 crowns. The heirs are inclined to contest the levy and have offered to settle at a greatly reduced figure.

The new organ of the Hedwig Eleonora church in Stockholm, built by the P. L. Akerman & Lund company, has recently been tested and accepted, the committee finding it perfect in every detail. The organ is one of thirty-seven pipes, and has three manuals and pedal key boards, with all modern improvements. It contains one set of pipes, the Chor Anglia, which no other organ in Stockholm has, and is in all respects a fine instrument.

There has been considerable in the Swedish press of late, about the "waterfall trust." In a recent issue of a Stockholm paper, Prof. Richter attempts to clear up the public understanding of the question by stating that no such trust is contemplated. He states that the movement which gave rise to this idea was simply the suggestion that a national association be formed to make possible uniform and just procedure in the granting of franchises for water power rights, and the better regulation of the use of the rivers and lakes. Prof. Richter's explanation of the matter has met with both criticism and approval, and it is safe to say that the question of the formation of such an association will be pretty thoroughly discussed.

The leaders in the movement that was started something over a year ago to induce Swedes in America to return to their native land, are not entirely discouraged by their lack of success. So far their labors along this line have shown but little result. Many of those who returned to Sweden to settle soon tired of the cramped conditions and have again returned to America, and at the best, only a small number were induced to take up their residence in Sweden in spite of the active work of the committee. The latest move is to interest the Swedish-American press in encouraging Swedish culture in America, and the keeping up of Swedish traditions, in the hopes that such a course will foster a love for the old country that shall eventually lead to the return of many. But in the meantime, the holiday exc
