This decision is the most important the great tribunal has ever made and will be handed down next Monday. The decision is in favor of the government, but by a divided bench.
The opinion of the majority of the court disposes of the uniform taxation clause of the constitution by saying in part, 'The framers of the constitution in writing that clause had no thought of its application to territorial possessions.' All of the clause, 'All duties, imposts and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States,' the court holds, was placed in the constitution to prevent any state or combination of states securing advantage over another.

NEW GOVERNOR FOR ALASKA.

John G. Brady's Term Expires This Month.

Alaska may have a new governor soon after President McKinley returns to Washington.

Governor John G. Brady's term expired this month, and he is now holding office through that provision of the law which keeps him until his successor is appointed.

The term of Joseph W. Ivey, collector of customs, with headquarters at Sitka, has also expired. Collector Ivey will probably remain in office for another four years. He has just been to Washington and has returned with a number of new appointments. The appointees have all been selected and will go north on the Thetis and the Manning to their several Alaska stations.

There will be deputy collectors stationed as follows:

Al H. Snyder, of Corvallis, Ore., deputy at Wrangle; Fred Burkhardt, of Portland, Ore., deputy at Unalak; F. H. Causten, of Wrangle, removed to St. Michaels to be head deputy there; Henry E. Smith, of California, deputy-in-chief at Nome; A. L. Powell, of Oregon, assistant deputy at Nome; Captain W. H. Patterson, a captain and pilot for many years on the Columbia river, deputy at Port Clarence and Teller City.

The appointment of Causten is in the nature of a promotion. He will occupy at St. Michaels the second best place in the service.

Mr. Causten is a democrat, but Collector Ivey says his efficiency deserves the appointment regardless of his politics. Mr. Causten has been in the Alaska customs service a number of years.

PLENTY OF WITNESSES

Federal Grand Jury Called for June 10.

ALL KINDS OF CASES

From Illegal Whiskey Selling and Cattle Stealing to Counterfeiting.—Cases of Local Interest.

The federal grand jury has been drawn and will be in session June 10. One hundred and thirty-six witnesses will testify before the jury in various cases. The United States district attorney is busy preparing for the trial of these matters.

Among the cases that will come before the grand jury are: The United States against J. T. Osborne and Frank Monroe, who were bound over to the grand jury by United States Commissioner E. C. Russell two months ago on a charge of having robbed a United States mail pouch of valuables, registered letters and packages just before Christmas last year. Some of the stolen property was found in the possession of Monroe when he was arrested in February.

Robert E. Lee of Billings is charged with having stolen cattle from the Indians in Garvin's basin on the Crow Indian reservation, says the Helena Record. He was arrested March 15 and was held to appear before the federal grand jury in the sum of $2,500. The arrest of Lee caused considerable excitement at the time in the vicinity of Billings, where he is well known. He is accused of having driven 500 head of Indian cattle from the reservation, defacing the Indian brands and substituting his own brand. He denied at the hearing before the United States commissioner that he had committed an unlawful act and said that he would be able to clear himself of the charge of theft.

Until a few months previous to the time of his arrest Lee was in the employ of Samuel Garvin of Billings, who owned a large stock ranch in what is known as Garvin's basin, in Wyoming. Garvin is said to have been running a brand of his own at the same time. When Lee was arrested Garvin, who had the financial backing of the First National bank of Billings, made an assignment of his interests to the bank. This fact created additional interest in the affair surrounding Lee, though the bank took no further interest in the matter than to investigate the condition of affairs in Garvin's basin.

James Young was bound over for hearing by the United States commissioner at Kalispell on a charge of having counterfeited money in his possession.

Andrew Ahren is accused of having stolen a horse from an Indian on the Crow Indian reservation in Wyoming and was transferred to this district for trial by the United States commissioner at Cheyenne.

John Cherry is charged with having sold whiskey to Indians, bound over from Missoula.

James O'Neill of Billings is charged with having sold whiskey to Indians.

Jake McAdams, who was bound over for trial on a charge of having stolen 100 head of horses from Indians on the Crow Indian reservation, will be called to account by the grand jury. He is now in the county jail at Helena.

Frank Belknap is charged with having sold whiskey to Indians on the Fort Belknap reservation.

George Allen and John Webber of Butte are charged with being counterfeiters.

Henry Walters and James Whitford will have a hearing on the charge of unlawfully cutting timber from government land on the Blackfoot Indian reservation.

Ralph Upham is charged with having sold whiskey to Indians on the Blackfoot Indian reservation.

THEIR CARDS A PRINTER'S RULE

Reminiscences of the Roadsters Who Made Montana

NO MACHINES THEN

The Boys Had a Chance at a Phat Take and Could Always Carry the Banner.

"There is a big difference between the old time Guttenberg compositor and the modern Mergenthaler operator," said J. S. Couch, an old time newspaper man, who visited Helena the other day. "In the days when I worked on the case, and traveled all over the country, there were a lot of men 'on the road' as we called it, whose like I do not think we will ever see again in the business. Some of them went to the bad, but there was a big proportion of capable fellows among them. Many of them could do anything about a newspaper office, from writing leaders to wrapping papers, and wherever they could find a printing office they could make themselves useful. Many of them were not dependable people, but they had the ability, and they had to know the business more thoroughly than the boy who goes into a newspaper composing room. In those days the majority of the editorial force graduated from the composing room, and I believe they made as good editors and newspaper men as we have today.

"I was not of the brilliant sort," continued the former compositor, "and I guess that is the reason I finally settled down on a ranch, and am now considered a well-to-do stockman. But there were a dozen of the men I used to meet all over the country, from Maine to California, and from the Canadian line to the gulf, who are still in the business, some of them on the big dailies in the highest positions, and others running more or less lucrative papers of their own. Some drifted into politics, and have held high positions in Washington, and been senators and members of congress. I guess the present day machine men are a more quiet lot, and more dependance can be placed on their being on hand when their services are required, but the old-timer, who had his 'nose in the space box' for years, to go into an up-to-date printing office now, it seems like a machine shop, and not like a place where they are getting out a newspaper. Somehow or other it makes me feel as though all the news was machine made too, and as for a 'hot' editorial, I doubt if a machine man can turn out one as sizzling as the old time 'comp.' used to.

"Since I have been in town I have been asking the old timers I have met for news of the old time printers, but they appear to have lost track of them. Among those I inquired about was W. T. Luddy, who has probably traveled over more miles of these United States as a printer than any other man in the business. They tell me that Luddy is now at Tombstone, Arizona, where he is running a paper. I hope he is making money, because he was a good fellow and a brilliant one. I remember once when I was working in a southern city Luddy came into the office. He had evidently been on the road for some time, and he did not have any money. He borrowed two dollars from the men, and went out to get something to eat and to get cleaned up. He stopped in a saloon on his way to eat, and saw a game of poker was going on. After watching it for a little while, he was asked to take a hand. He did so, and he was lucky. He played all that night, all the next day, and the following night until daylight, when he had all the money in the crowd.

"It was more money than Luddy had had for years at one time, and he did not know what to do with it. He told me his after experience. 'I thought I would take a walk and I did so. The sun never appeared more beautiful, nor the air more balmy. I walked out of the town, into the country, and thought it was good to be living. I did not feel hungry nor sleepy, though I had not slept for three nights, and had only eaten a little. I
