ANOTHER NAVY YARD FIRE

Two Disastrous Conflagrations Within One Week.

The Fire Is Believed to Be of Incendiary Origin and Close Inquiry Will Be Made.

Another disastrous fire occurred at the navy yard yesterday afternoon. Strangely enough, the building, which was partially burned, is the one temporarily occupied by the paymaster, or what is known as the general storekeeper's office, which was the main department which suffered the loss of its quarters by fire last Thursday.

There are strong suspicions that both fires were of incendiary origin, and the most rigid inquiry will be made by the navy yard officials into the matter.

Shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon a dense volume of smoke was discovered pouring from the upper windows and from beneath the roof. A hasty investigation showed that the entire attic was on fire, and an alarm was turned in from box 528 for the department.

At the same time lines of hose kept in that and adjoining buildings were attached to the hydrants, and it was not long before three streams of water had been turned upon the flames.

The department was quick to respond, and in a short time the fire was under control. The greater portion of the furniture and other goods in the building was gotten out safely, so that the principal damage was to the structure itself.

The building was one of the oldest in the yard, having been constructed about 1870. For a long time it has been principally occupied by the seamen gunners, and was always known as their quarters. About three months ago the old store room, No. 1, was filled up for them at the time the general storekeeper's office was removed from close into the building which burned last week. The lower floor was used as a sort of plumber's shop, while the second floor and the dormitory were temporarily fitted up for the general storekeeper and the expanding boards.

There was practically nothing left in the little, low attic, and it is regarded as impossible that the fire could have started there accidentally.

Another strange feature is the fact that the origin was almost identically the same as that of last week, which also started under similar circumstances in the attic and in the same department of the Navy.

The total loss it is believed will not be over $3,000, mainly to the building.

RICHMOND BEAT COLUMBIA.

Local Team Could Not Connect With Elyson's Lively Curves.

The Richmond College ball team defeated Columbia University today at the ground on the latter yesterday afternoon by a score of 11 to 4. It was a splendid exhibition of the national game, and was greatly enjoyed by 100 or more spectators who witnessed it.

It was the second time the teams had crossed bats this season, the result of the first meeting being the same as that of yesterday, a victory for the visitors.

The boys from Richmond put up an excellent game, and won by their clock like hitting. They were very handy with the bat, and managed to hit the ball hard and safe at critical points in the game.

The home team, while showing lack of team work, failed to connect with Elyson's curves, except on two occasions, until the sixth inning. In the seventh inning after two hands were out, Farnham drew a base on balls, stole second and was sent across the plate by Greene's long drive to right field. Later Greene was caught napping at third. In the ninth they made rally and scored three runs, but it was too late to save them from defeat.
